Protection pledged to N.Y. residents

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford pledged today the federal government will help assure police and fire protection for New York City residents if the city defaults on its debts, but he said he will veto any bill that would bail the city out financially.

"I can tell you now that I'm prepared to veto any bill that has as its purpose a federal bailout of New York City to prevent a default," Ford said in remarks prepared for the National Press Club here.

But in a lengthy speech on the problems of the nation's largest city, Ford said he will submit legislation to Congress impowering federal courts "to preside over an orderly reorganization of New York City's financial affairs — should that become necessary."

Ford also said that in the event of default, "the federal government will work with the court to assure that police, fire and other essential services for the protection of life and property in New York are maintained."

The proposed legislation would amend the federal bankruptcy laws and would allow New York City, with approval from New York state, to petition the U.S. District Court in New York when and if it is no longer able to pay its debts.

The petition would be accompanied by proposals for "an adjustment" of the city's debts with its creditors. Once those conditions are met, the federal court then would be authorized to accept jurisdiction of the case and there would be an automatic moratorium on suits by creditors so that the essential functions of New York City would not be disrupted.

George Washington pays off

Bond says situation is bleak

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Christopher S. Bond continued to paint a bleak picture of the state's financial situation today, warning his 14 department directors that "there is just not enough money."

Bond told the directors that it still appears that three per cent of their budgeted funds for this year will have to be withheld, probably next spring, to balance the budget.

For every dollar appropriated by the legislature in the mid-year emergency funding bill in January, Bond said a dollar from the regular appropriation will have to be withheld under the 3 per cent provision.

Commissioner of Administration J. Neil Nielsen said the amount of general revenue appropriated in the emergency bill "will have a serious effect on the need for withholding the 3 per cent." But he contended that there would be no direct trade-off between the amount of the emergency funding and the total funds withheld in the spring.

Budget Director Mark Edelman admitted that the state's revenue picture was improving but he said it still appeared there would not be the 9 per cent increase in receipts needed to avoid withholding any budgeted funds.

Bond also said there will only be enough money for next year's budget to cover cost-of-living salary hikes and inflation, and that is based on the assumption that there will be an increase in revenues.

He commended both the Department of Agriculture and the Department of Natural Resources for most closely holding the line in submitting "barebones" budget requests for next year. And the governor said he would work closely with the other department chiefs to bring their requests in line.

Appeal hearings on the governor's budget decisions for next year will begin in December.

Patrolman and Bluff woman hurt seriously

A highway patrolman and a Poplar Bluff woman were seriously injured and a Dexter man received minor injuries in two traffic accidents on area roads Tuesday, the highway patrol announced today.

Trooper Billy Joe Kincaide of Dexter, who was directing traffic on Highway 60, four miles east of Fisk at the scene of a disabled grain truck, and Jeraldene Jones, 36, of Poplar Bluff, driver of a westbound automobile, were seriously injured in an accident at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The patrol said Mrs. Jones had stopped her car at the direction of Kincaide, who was motioning for an eastbound tractor-trailer truck driven by Willie Health, 52, of Sikeston to proceed, when another tractor-trailer truck, traveling west and driven by Paul Edward Buchalla, 29, of San Leandro, Calif., failed to stop and struck the back of the Jones car.

The Jones car then struck Kincaide, knocking him about 113 feet. Buchalla's truck also struck Heath's truck, then jackknifed into a ditch, where a load of cages containing five live leopards was thrown from the trailer. However, the cages held together and none of the animals escaped.

Kincaide and Mrs. Jones were taken to Doctors Hospital at Poplar Bluff.

Robert Owen Kennedy, 35, of Dexter, received minor injuries in a one-vehicle accident at 1:58 p.m. Tuesday on Route WW three miles north of Dudley.

The accident occurred when Kennedy lost control of his southbound car on a curve while traveling at a high rate of speed and the vehicle ran off the road.

He was taken to Dexter Memorial Hospital.

Health clinic to move to new quarters

BENTON — Warren R. Manning, administrator of the Scott County Health Department, told the board of trustees Tuesday that the clinic in Sikeston will move into new quarters Nov. 6.

Manning said the new quarters, located at 804 Tanner St., will provide clinic services, prenatal care, child health care, immunizations and nursing services and that the home health agency also will have an office in the building.

The building, he said, will provide better facilities for wheelchair patients since it is on ground level with easy access to the parking lot.

Manning also reported he received a $20,000 state budget check for county health services on Oct. 1. H said this was after the withholding of three per cent by the state under new regulations.

He also said that he had received a letter from Billy Rikard, director of the Division of Health in Jefferson City, asking how the cut had affected the health care provided by the county.

Manning said the Scott County

Local officer acted correctly, chief says

Police Chief Leon Culp said today that his investigation into a Saturday night incident in which a Miner police officer did not receive support from Sikeston police shows that the officer in charge acted correctly.

Original reports on the incident indicated that Miner officer Ed Sexton pursued a car into the Sikeston city limits and radioed Sikeston police for assistance. Capt. Lawrence Woodward reportedly refused to allow a Sikeston officer to assist Sexton.

However, Culp said Sexton had radioed Sikeston saying he was chasing a subject and would like a backup car. Officer Gary Brown then went to the Sikeston city limits and waited.

Culp said his investigation shows that Sexton stopped the car 50 to 300 feet outside the city limits, that Brown did not see anything out of the ordinary and that Sexton had no way to get back to his radio to notify Sikeston that he needed help.

Culp said Woodward had told Brown to help only if he knew that help was needed and knew where Sexton was stopped.

Culp said Brown did not know where Sexton was and or that he needed help.

About two minutes after he stopped, Brown said he saw Miner Marshal Bud Travelstead go by in search of Sexton. Travelstead found Sexton and helped make the arrest.

Culp said the Sikeston Police Department has always helped other law enforcement agencies and will continue to do so when they know the other agency needs help.

Clinic board elected

A board of directors was elected Tuesday night to supervise the formation of a professionally staffed mental health clinic to serve Scott, Stoddard and Mississippi counties.

The Tri-County Counseling Service, Inc., a non-profit corporation, will begin fund raising activities during the next two weeks.

The Missouri Department of Mental Health will staff the clinic with two fulltime counselors. Scott, Stoddard and Mississippi counties will pay for office rent, supplies and a fulltime secretary.

Board members from Sikeston are John C. David, Bob Schumacker, Pat Jones, Gloria Dible, Peggy Eshelman, Ronald Payne and Lewis Blanton; from Dexter are Col. Cliff Manlove, Noemy Jibben and Tom Skinner; from Charleston are Mildred Wallhausen, Margaret Rowe and Don Moxley, and from Benton is Glenda Davis.

EDA rejects Miner's $650,000 request

The Economic Development Administration has turned down a request from Miner for $650,000 in federal funds to help construct water and sewer facilities.

Total cost of the project will be in excess of $1 million and Miner is seeking the rest of the funds from other agencies.

Mayor L. F. Wheeler said the town board has not given up hope and says the rejection may not be final.

Downing to introduce 'right to die' bill

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri Bootheel Democrat Vic Downing said Tuesday he will introduce a "right to die" bill for consideration in the upcoming regular session of the legislature.

"I know these bills are controversial and complicated, but I believe the legislature should enact a law that would give our citizens the right to die and a freedom of choice in this timely and serious matter," the Bragg City House member said in a statement.

"This is something the state is going to have to come to grips with," he added, explaining that he will sponsor a second proposal outlining a legal definition of death.

The issue of a person's right to die has received national attention in the past few months as a New Jersey couple have gone to court in an attempt to have their 21-year-old daughter taken off a respirator which has been keeping her alive for the past six months.

The girl, Karen Anne Quinlan, has been in a coma and doctors have indicated there is no hope for recovery. A decision in that case, which is expected to ultimately go the U.S. Supreme Court, is expected in the next two weeks.

Downing's proposal would allow a patient or his authorized representative to terminate all treatment other than that to alleviate pain upon the sworn certification by two doctors that the patient is terminally ill and has no chance of recovery.

No one could be liable for damages or liable under criminal law for any act or failure to act under the provisions of the measure, Downing said.

The definition of death proposed by the lawmaker would state that "for all legal purposes a human body with irreversible cessation of total brain functions according to usual and customary standards of medical practice shall be considered dead."

She's riding horse from Canada to Gulf

By RON PORTER

Mary Ellen Eckelberg resumed her journey south to the Gulf of Mexico today, despite the cold rain which fell much of the morning.

The 31-year-old Clinton, Iowa woman is riding horseback from Winnipeg, Canada to the Gulf in honor of the nation's Bicentennial.

She spent the night at the Burl Givens home on Route H, north of Miner. She will spend the night at New Madrid.

Miss Eckelburg is making the 3,000 mile journey because, she says, no one has ever done it before on horseback.

The trip is harder than crossing the country east and west she said. There are more towns to go through and the trip might not be as appealing to people wanting to make a long horse trip.

She is the second person crossing the country on Bicentennial journeys to pass through the Sikeston area this month. The first, man, is westbound from Michigan.

Miss Eckelberg started her trip in June and expects to arrive in New Orleans by Christmas and the Gulf by Jan. 1, 1976.

She drove through the area last year and contacted the Big River Appoloosa Horse Club. Members agreed to give her a place to stay during her trip, she said. The Givenses are members of the club.

She said she had not had any problems during the trip. She makes about 25 to 30 miles a day, even on rainy days such as today.

Miss Eckelberg was a high school teacher for six years and for the past two and a half years, worked as a welder in a factory.

Her horse is a purebred Arabian gelding.

SOVIET SPIES ON CAPITOL HILL?

There is an intriguing and sensational report that has bobbed to the surface recently in Washington, only to sink beneath the level of public concern. The report is that a number of congressional offices are infiltrated by the Soviets.

In a recent interview with Martin Agronsky on public television, Sen. Barry Goldwater declared that the Soviet Union has "absolutely infiltrated" the United States, including every major business, industry, and even the committees of Congress. The Arizona Republican said specifically that the Soviets have infiltrated "seven or nine" Senate offices.

"Spying in this country is so fantastically larger than what we do, that there's no way to talk about it," said Goldwater. He explained that his information about the seven or nine Senate offices came from Vice President Rockefeller, who headed the commission which investigated the CIA.

"I did question him (the Vice President) after his paper was published and there was no mention of it and he said, 'I could only print what I was allowed to print," explained Goldwater.

The Senator's statement begs to be followed up by the press as well as by concerned Americans. Goldwater has indicated he now is asking Senate intelligence investigators to look into these charges. A member of his staff also told a Washington reporter that "the Senator has no information at this time beyond that initial statement, but he's going to dig further into the matter and others have now picked it up as well."

In the meantime, it is vital that the American public be aware that these charges have been raised. And we also deserve some hard answers to such questions as: who ordered this information to be deleted from the Rockefeller report on the CIA? How were these Senate offices infiltrated? What is being done to clean out the infiltrators in the "seven or nine" offices and to prevent a recurrence?

Soviet grain purchases will be much bigger than so far expected, says shipbrokers, as reported in Barron's. They are well placed to give early warning of big Russian imports (as they did very accurately three years ago), because ship charters are fixed in the freight market in advance of buying their cargoes. This time shipbrokers are forecasting that the Russians will buy another 10 million tons of grain, over and above the 15 million tons already ordered in North America, Argentina and Australia.

This would help explain two other developments. The chief gold dealer of the Swiss Credit Bank says Moscow has sold between 100 and 130 tons of gold in free markets this year, presumably in order to raise cash for grain deals. Moreover, according to the bankers, the Soviet Union and Comecon banks will have borrowed $1 billion from the Eurodollar market by the end of the year. That will help cover the Russians' rising trade deficit with the West, which is estimated at $1.4 billion so far this year, even before the grain imports are paid for. Moscow is going deeply in debt (it owes about one-quarter of its annual hard-currency earnings) to feed its citizens.

PLANS FOR PUERTO RICAN TERRORISM

According to Intelligence Digest, select Communist subversives and terrorist tacticians met in Havana, Cuba, recently to initiate a massive anti-American campaign in which agitation, propaganda and terrorism are to play major roles for wresting Puerto Rico away from the United States and subsequently turning that possession into a Marxist state closely aligned with Cuba.

Puerto Rican terrorism is nothing new. A wave of bombing in San Juan, Puerto Rico, and also in New York have already occurred. What is new, however, is the Communist belief that the time is now ripe to launch an international effort to bring forth a protracted struggle, using armed forces when appropriate, for creation of a "liberated" Puerto Rico along Marxist lines. Guerrilla terrorists for this campaign are already being trained in Cuba along Viet Cong lines as applied South Vietnam and to project a massive humiliation of America during its 1976 Bicentennial anniversary.

Despite the sham of detente, the Soviet Union is firmly backing Castro's latest adventure aimed directly at the United States and its Caribbean possession. International Communist support for Puerto Rican independence from the United States was earlier documented in Havana from June 9 to 13 at the Conference of Communist Parties of Latin America and the Caribbean.

Support for Puerto Rican independence in the form of a Marxist totalitarian state is now being emphasized by the Communist Party, USA (CPUSA), its front groups and collaborationist organizations which seeks the dismemberment of the United States. The Communist agitators fail to mention that 1,400,000 Puerto Ricans have willingly moved to the U. S. to enjoy even greater prosperity and freedom. 2,800,000 Puerto Ricans remaining on the island receive generous U.S. monetary assistance and are not required to pay taxes. The vast majority of Puerto Ricans enjoy their commonwealth status and reject independence. Thousands of them volunteered to fight Communism in both Korea and Vietnam, and Intelligence Digest says they will again fight any Red detachments arriving from Cuba.

The American Communist youth movement, the "Young Workers Liberation League (YWLL) is also very active in agitprop work on behalf of Puerto Rican "independence." As the youth arm of the CPUSA, the YWLL also maintains close laison with both Moscow and Havana. James Steele, YWLL national chairman, has just returned from an 11 day visit to the Soviet Union where he headed a delegation for joint discussions with the Komsomol, the Soviet Young Communist League. Both organizations are members of the World Federation of Democratic Youth. Moscow intends to hold its 11th World Youth Festival of Youth and Students in Cuba in 1978. By that time, an armed insurgency will be well underway in Puerto Rico--unless adequate security measures are promptly undertaken by the U.S. government.

A VETO WAS OVERRIDDEN

It isn't too often, but the Senate and House did it again. They overrode another of President Ford's vetoes. This one pertained to the $2.75 billion child nutrition bill.

Members of the House did a remarkable job of overriding his veto but it was closer in the Senate. However, there were votes to spare.

Mr. Ford thought the measure was too expensive. That might very well be, but we believe many of Mr. Ford's plans and suggestions are too expensive, like some of his foreign aid payments. We've always believed it might be better to take care of our own first and then if there is anything left over, take care of those at a distance.

For instance, here's one item where a savings might be made. The Air Force planned and apparently did fly 500 Air Force Academy cadets in four C-144 jet transports to the Navy-Air Force game at the Robert F. Kennedy Stadium in Washington, D.C., on Oct. 4.

The cost of the trip for the 500 men was estimated at $100,000, including fuel and maintenance costs, expense money for air crews and faculty advisers. We realize, quite naturally, that $100,000 doesn't mean much to those in Washington, D.C., but it might have been a start in economy on a small scale.

FOOD STAMPS ARE FOR THE POOR

Under the present food stamp program, there are so many deductions allowed against gross income that persons with incomes as high as $16,000 a year are eligible.

This is one of the main reasons the program has mushroomed out of control. There now are almost 19 million Americans using food stamps at a projected annual cost of about $6.8 billion.

To restore some order to the program, President Ford has asked Congress to deny food stamps to families whose income is above the government's poverty level. The Ford plan would save about $1.2 billion a year.

Under the president's proposal the poverty level would be set at $5,050. In addition, each family would be allowed to increase this base eligibility standard by $100 a month for expenses and $25 a month if the family includes a person 60 years old or older. Thus a family which included a member 60 years old would be allowed to earn $6,550 and still be eligible to obtain food stamps.

This is a sensible plan. It would direct the aid to those who really need it —the poor—and take it from those who are taking a free ride on the program simply because they like the idea of getting something for nothing.

A recent study showed that upper income groups are getting 2 ½ times as many food stamps as the poor who really need help. This seems to be the history of too many federal programs. They start out with a plan to help the needy and before too long the eligibility standards have been eased to point that the fur coat crowd is elbowing in on the action.

George McGovern, as might be expected, doesn't like the President's common sense proposal. McGovern called it "a surrender to some of the more extreme critics." Like the American public, perhaps?

DON'T BLAME THE FARMER!

Farmers have gotten virtually none of the money from higher prices that Americans have paid for food in the past year.

Figures from the U.S. Department of Agriculture show that a "market basket" of food produced on farms sufficient to feed an average urban household for a year would have cost $1,832 at prices prevailing during the first half of 1975, according to U.S. News & World Report.

This represents an increase of $105 from the previous year. Of this total, farmers received only $1. The other $104 went to processors, wholesalers, grocers, transportation firms and other "middlemen."

This is an almost unprecedented "shutting out" of farmers from food price increases. From 1964 through 1974 the market basket cost increased by $741. Farmers got almost an even split of this —$364.

The food dollar was distributed this way in 1974: farmer, 37.6 cents; retailer, 32.2 cents; processor, 18.3 cents; wholesaler, 7 cents and transportation, 4.9 cents. The figures are gross measurements and do not reflect the profit picture.

To shoppers wondering who is getting the income from higher food prices, it is obvious they shouldn't blame the farmer. His income is just about where it was a year ago. Higher costs were almost all concentrated in getting food to tables. The Department of Agriculture reported these higher prices were most pronounced in bakery and cereal products, processed fruits, vegetables, fat and oil products, and sugar. So don't blame farmers. They mainly deserve sympathy and thanks for a job well done.

DOMESTIC AFFAIR

Thinking to cheer him, I got out a card I'd been saving for just the right moment and taped it to the headboard of our bed. It read: "Cheer up. Things could be worse. You could have my job!"

The next morning, I found this note penciled on the card: "No thanks. I couldn't stand your husband."

PLANNING IS NECESSARY

Prospects for a higher quality oflife for Americans of future generations were dimmed this weekwhen the U.S. House of Representatives defeated a bill providing funds for the states to develop land-use plans.

The measure, sponsored by Arizona Democrat Morris K. Udall, would have given the states incentive for effective control of development of their rapidly diminishing reserve of open land. It would, in essence, have set up statewide programs similar to municipal zoning regulations.

At least a dozen states have already seen the need to protect wetlands, forests and agricultural lands and to consider the long-range public interest when construction of power plants, airports and development projects is approved.

But in general, past efforts at land-use planning have been haphazard, inefficient, and most regrettably, designed with only short-term goals in mind. The Udall bill would have expanded and improved those efforts.

The various commodity shortages of recent months have more clearly demonstrated that reckless consumption of limited resources cannot continue. The land, for years considered virtually limitless, should now be viwed as the most obviously finite of Earth's resources, Nw forms of energy can be developed. It would be much harder to find a substitute for the land. And reclaiming recklessly developed areas has proved much more costly than proper planning would have been.

Udall's land-use measure has questionable points,not the least of wich is a vagueness about the control federal agencies would exercise over local government in developing land-use plans. The harshest federal involvement, a schedule of sanctions against states which failed to draw up plans within federal guidelines, was removed in committee.

The bill, not defeated outright, but sent back to committee without debate, is unlikely to reach the floor again this session. It would have stood better chances of approval had the federal role been reduced.

Almost certainly, similar legislation will be introduced next year. Bu the new Congress is likely to be more volatile this, and states would do well to initiate land-use planning on their own before Congress adopts a measure with more federal restrictions.

Meanwhile, in the year it will probably take new legislation to reach the floor of Congress, more than 730,000 acres of valuable agricultural land — an area roughly one and one half times the size of Shelby County — will be swallowed up in the nation's haphazardly planned urban sprawl.

Inside Labor
By Victor Riesel

Politics Rocked and Rolled: Kennedy Privately Told Labor Chiefs He's Out -- Positively Absolutely Won't Take Draft.

MILWAUKEE - Just down the street from my New York home is an all-night rock and roll theater adding a positive nowness touch to the old mid-Manhattan gold coast. As I was dashing for an early plane to this politically significant Midwest city, I passed the young theatergoers seeking early breadfast and singing the tunes of a new rock group called "F. Hubbard Humphrey."

Someone said something snide about "old father Hubbard ... has an empty political cupboard." But the crowd wasn't turned off. Actually among the liberal, new liberal or old Democratic regulars, few are turned off.

Some of those regulars, however, such as labor's George Meany and steelworkers' chief Abe Abel, first wanted to know just exactly what, and no fudging, are Sen. Edward Kennedy's real intentions.

So sometime before their national convention, Al Barkan, continent- hopping director of the AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education, was dispatched to see Ted Kennedy personally and privately. According to my source -- and there are few who are more intimate with the nation's most influential policymaking labor leaders -- Sen. Kennedy said: No. Flatly. Absolutely. Irrevocably.

Reportedly he told Barkan that no one could convince him to run and, in effect, if drafted and nominated for President, he wouldn't take it. This is not his moment. He wants to run for reelection. Period.

I trust my source. He never has been wrong. Not in the 20 years I've known him. I got no comment from Ted Kennedy's headquarters. One of the Senator's closest aides did point out that Ted has invited Al Barkan, some key union leaders and a handful of non-labor political people to a private breakfast July 22 at the Quality Inn Motel on Capitol Hill. There Kennedy had told them flatly that he was going to run for reelection and reelection only in '76 regardless of what the political conjurers smoked up.

Further, Kennedy said he planned to spend most of his time in Massachusetts from now on. There are many critical issues -- economic, social, health service, not to mention busing., And his people say these days nothing can be taken for granted.

Thus in effect Kennedy told the national labor chiefs twice -- don't do anything at your national gathering which would insinuate that I would run if drafted. And there are candidates who have his blessing. My source says that satisfied Meany, who rarely puts himself into a position of truly angering a man who might be President of the U. S. Criticism.. A definite break, no.

I've tried to contact Al Barkan, Mr. Labor Politics himself. But when I telephoned him last he was discussing vote-getting action with Indians in Arizona "four hours car ride from Phoenix."

Did Barkan's conversation with Kennedy and the message he took with him mean that labor finally considers Ted Kennedy definitely out in 1976.. My source says the answer is yes. And there's no hedging with "It's too early." That's what topside labor thinks. And what that force thinks means millions of votes and tens of millions of dollars.

Then will labor's favorite really be Hubert Humphrey - despite all the talk that of course he will be.. Nothing is certain with Hubert. Much will depend on how strongly Indiana's Sen. Birch Bayh comes out of presidential primaries such as those to be held in Wisconsin and New York on April 6. Especially since HHH won't be in any of the 33 pre-election delegation balloting.

One thing does seem clear -- most labor men are out to smash Sen. Scoop Jackson. Especially in New York. There a split labor movement has its favorites. But Jackson isn't one of them. And no matter what he does elsewhere, he'll break his political legs in one of the first laps if he doesn't ring up a big one in the April race in New York State.

There the labor split is between a powerful faction which is eager to put Gov. Hugh Carey, a devout Catholic, on the national ticket and a building and construction bloc which actually still is Republican and wants to neutralize the state Democratic and liberal forces.

The Democratic- labor coalition actually is fond of Hubert. And they talk wistfully about a Kennedy- Humphrey ticket or a Humphrey- Kennedy ticket. But they're in real- politik. They know they have to win convention delegates for someone -- and Humphrey isn't on the slate and Jackson is and they just don't like Jackson. So Carey seems a natural to them for second place.

Thus it is in many states. Actually COPE now is seeking ways and fronts with which to wade into the Democratic primaries though months ago Meany said labor never would get into the primary act. Nonetheless, my source says that there is much talk on labor's executive suite - laden "eighth floor" in the national AFL-CIO headquarters about making a fight for control of big blocs of convention delegates.

For two reasons: Meany is determined to put an outspoken and trusted friend in the White House. And "The Group" (a loose coalition of eight liberal unions) is meeting regularly to coordinate Democratic national nominating convention delegate selection primary fights in 20 states.And Meany and his high command aren't about to let it go by default as they did in 1972 when top labor chiefs went to Europe during the height of the California and New York primaries leaving Humphrey to flounder, penniless.

Thus, to labor's inner circle it now looks like a Kennedy- less campaign, but they still think they'll pick a winner.

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Warren Commission Suspected FBI Coverup
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — In earlier columns, we reported that the FBI defied a Warren Commission resolution and held back internal documents about the John F. Kennedy assassination.

The commission, according to its own internal memos, suspected this from the beginning.

Early in 1964, for example, the commission obtained from the Justice Department two FBI memos that could not be found in the commission's files. Staff attorney Charles Shaffer, who later was to gain national prominence as John Dean's Watergate lawyer, declared in a confidential memo:

"I am morally certain that neither of (the memos) have been transmitted to (general counsel J.Lee) Rankin as they properly should have been. Accordingly, I am disturbed that the Bureau is conducting (an) investigation and not furnishing us with the results.

"Knowing the Bureau as we do, I suggest the matter be informally discussed with their representative in contact with the Commission. In this way, the matter can be corrected with the least amount of friction."

Rankin replied in a handwritten scrawl that he had "noted and talked" with the FBI liaison man about the missing documents on Jan. 14, 1964. Nonetheless, hundreds of internal memos were withheld from the commission.

The commission attorneys also suspected – correctly, it now turns out – that the FBI wasn't leveling with them about its contacts with the accused assassin, Lee Harvey Oswald.

One of them, Norman Redlich, now dean of the New York University SLaw School, discovered a startling omission in an FBI summary of the contents of Oswald's notebook. The FBI neglected to mention that one of its agents, James Hosty, was listed in the notebook.

This also disturbed another staff attorney, Howard Willens, who wrote Rankin in the strictest confidence on Feb. 13, 1964: "I share everyone's concern that this is a matter of great importance." He urged Rankin to demand a "full explanation" from the FBI.

A week later, Rankin wrote sternly to the late FBI director J. Edgar Hoover: "The Commission would like to be informed of the circumstances surrounding this omission," including the names of those who ordered it.

An outragewd Hoover fired back the astonishing explanation that Hosty's name was omitted because it wasn't needed by the commission as an investigative lead."

Added Hoover crisply, if not correctly: "This Bureau from the beginning of this investigation has developed and reported all available and relevatn facts and it will continue to do so."

Meanwhile, Dallas County's big, shaggy district attorney, Henry Wade, reported to the Warren Commission that he had heard Oswald was an FBI informant.

Inside FBI headquarters, Hoover exploded with rage. He scribbled some sizzling comments about Wade, a former FBI undercover agent, in the margins of memos which were never shown to the commission.

What he sent to the commission was a sworn, detailed affidavit denying that Oswald had ever been an FBI informant. But this didn't satisfy one staff attorney, Leon D. Hubert, Jr., who pointed out in a confidential memo:

"Mr. Hoover's affidavit ... covers his knowledge, but it can only do that. What about an affidavit of the head of the security division at headquarters, FBI, Washington? He should know who is or who is not an informant...

"It should be noted that payment in money is not the only way to engage an informant. I do not think there is any chicanery here; but for the sake of a perfect record, refuting the rumor, I make these comments."

Rankin tried to bring the conflict with Hoover to a head, as gently as possible, on March 26, 1964. Rankin praised the FBI chief for being "most cooperative," and then hit him with 30 blockbuster questions.

"What was the FBI evaluation of Oswald? ... Why did the FBI make three attempts within eight days (Oct. 29 to Nov. 5, 1963) to locate Oswald ? ... Were any further efforts made between Nov. 5 and Nov. 22 to locate Oswald, and if not, why not?"

Like bombs hitting around a target, the questions almost exploded the secrets that the FBI has buried for 12 years. But Hoover, if he knew that Oswald had delivered a threatening note to the FBI office in Dallas less than a week before assassinating President Kennedy, didn't reveal it to the Warren Commissiion.

"At the outset," wrote Hoover, "I wish to emphasize that the facts available to the FBI concerning Lee Harvey Oswald prior to the assassination did not indicate in any way that he was or would be a threat to President Kennedy ...

"In the absence of any information showing Oswald to be a possible threat to the President, there was no basis to inform the Secret Service concerning Oswald's presence or employment in Dallas."

We have had access at least to some of the material that the FBI suppressed. We have found nothing that would change the official verdict that Oswald, acting alone, gunned down President Kennedy.

The purpose of the coverup, apparently, was to spare the FBI any embarrassment.

SOVIET SPIES ON CAPITOL HILL?

There is an intriguing and sensational report that has bobbed to the surface recently in Washington, only to sink beneath the level of public concern. The report is that a number of congressional offices are infiltrated by the Soviets.

In a recent interview with Martin Agronsky on public television, Sen. Barry Goldwater declared that the Soviet Union has "absolutely infiltrated" the United States, including every major business, industry, and even the committees of Congress. The Arizona Republican said specifically that the Soviets have infiltrated "seven or nine" Senate offices.

"Spying in this country is so fantastically larger than what we do, that there's no way to talk about it," said Goldwater. He explained that his information about the seven or nine Senate offices came from Vice President Rockefeller, who headed the commission which investigated the CIA.

"I did question him (the Vice President) after his paper was published and there was no mention of it and he said, 'I could only print what I was allowed to print," explained Goldwater.

The Senator's statement begs to be followed up by the press as well as by concerned Americans. Goldwater has indicated he now is asking Senate intelligence investigators to look into these charges. A member of his staff also told a Washington reporter that "the Senator has no information at this time beyond that initial statement, but he's going to dig further into the matter and others have now picked it up as well."

In the meantime, it is vital that the American public be aware that these charges have been raised. And we also deserve some hard answers to such questions as: who ordered this information to be deleted from the Rockefeller report on the CIA? How were these Senate offices infiltrated? What is being done to clean out the infiltrators in the "seven or nine" offices and to prevent a recurrence?

Soviet grain purchases will be much bigger than so far expected, says shipbrokers, as reported in Barron's. They are well placed to give early warning of big Russian imports (as they did very accurately three years ago), because ship charters are fixed in the freight market in advance of buying their cargoes. This time shipbrokers are forecasting that the Russians will buy another 10 million tons of grain, over and above the 15 million tons already ordered in North America, Argentina and Australia.

This would help explain two other developments. The chief gold dealer of the Swiss Credit Bank says Moscow has sold between 100 and 130 tons of gold in free markets this year, presumably in order to raise cash for grain deals. Moreover, according to the bankers, the Soviet Union and Comecon banks will have borrowed $1 billion from the Eurodollar market by the end of the year. That will help cover the Russians' rising trade deficit with the West, which is estimated at $1.4 billion so far this year, even before the grain imports are paid for. Moscow is going deeply in debt (it owes about one-quarter of its annual hard-currency earnings) to feed its citizens.

This represents an increase of $105 from the previous year. Of this total, farmers received only $1. The other $104 went to processors, wholesalers, grocers, transportation firms and other "middlemen."

This is an almost unprecedented "shutting out" of farmers from food price increases. From 1964 through 1974 the market basket cost increased by $741. Farmers got almost an even split of this —$364.

The food dollar was distributed this way in 1974: farmer, 37.6 cents; retailer, 32.2 cents; processor, 18.3 cents; wholesaler, 7 cents and transportation, 4.9 cents. The figures are gross measurements and do not reflect the profit picture.

To shoppers wondering who is getting the income from higher food prices, it is obvious they shouldn't blame the farmer. His income is just about where it was a year ago. Higher costs were almost all concentrated in getting food to tables. The Department of Agriculture reported these higher prices were most pronounced in bakery and cereal products, processed fruits, vegetables, fat and oil products, and sugar. So don't blame farmers. They mainly deserve sympathy and thanks for a job well done.

DOMESTIC AFFAIR

ONE NIGHT when life was weighing rather heavily on my spouse's shoulders, I left him watching the late news and went off to bed. Thinking to cheer him, I got out a card I'd been saving for just the right moment and taped it to the headboard of our bed. It read: "Cheer up. Things could be worse. You could have my job!"

The next morning, I found this note penciled on the card: "No thanks. I couldn't stand your husband."

PLANNING IS NECESSARY

Prospects for a higher quality oflife for Americans of future generations were dimmed this weekwhen the U.S. House of Representatives defeated a bill providing funds for the states to develop land-use plans.

The measure, sponsored by Arizona Democrat Morris K. Udall, would have given the states incentive for effective control of development of their rapidly diminishing reserve of open land. It would, in essence, have set up statewide programs similar to municipal zoning regulations.

At least a dozen states have already seen the need to protect wetlands, forests and agricultural lands and to consider the long-range public interest when construction of power plants, airports and development projects is approved.

But in general, past efforts at land-use planning have been haphazard, inefficient, and most regrettably, designed with only short-term goals in mind. The Udall bill would have expanded and improved those efforts.

The various commodity shortages of recent months have more clearly demonstrated that reckless consumption of limited resources cannot continue. The land, for years considered virtually limitless, should now be viwed as the most obviously finite of Earth's resources, Nw forms of energy can be developed. It would be much harder to find a substitute for the land. And reclaiming recklessly developed areas has proved much more costly than proper planning would have been.

Udall's land-use measure has questionable points,not the least of wich is a vagueness about the control federal agencies would exercise over local government in developing land-use plans. The harshest federal involvement, a schedule of sanctions against states which failed to draw up plans within federal guidelines, was removed in committee.

The bill, not defeated outright, but sent back to committee without debate, is unlikely to reach the floor again this session. It would have stood better chances of approval had the federal role been reduced.

Almost certainly, similar legislation will be introduced next year. Bu the new Congress is likely to be more volatile this, and states would do well to initiate land-use planning on their own before Congress adopts a measure with more federal restrictions.

Meanwhile, in the year it will probably take new legislation to reach the floor of Congress, more than 730,000 acres of valuable agricultural land — an area roughly one and one half times the size of Shelby County — will be swallowed up in the nation's haphazardly planned urban sprawl.

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Warren Commission Suspected FBI Coverup
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — In earlier columns, we reported that the FBI defied a Warren Commission resolution and held back internal documents about the John F. Kennedy assassination.

The commission, according to its own internal memos, suspected this from the beginning.

Early in 1964, for example, the commission obtained from the Justice Department two FBI memos that could not be found in the commission's files. Staff attorney Charles Shaffer, who later was to gain national prominence as John Dean's Watergate lawyer, declared in a confidential memo:

"I am morally certain that neither of (the memos) have been transmitted to (general counsel J.Lee) Rankin as they properly should have been. Accordingly, I am disturbed that the Bureau is conducting (an) investigation and not furnishing us with the results.

"Knowing the Bureau as we do, I suggest the matter be informally discussed with their representative in contact with the Commission. In this way, the matter can be corrected with the least amount of friction."

Rankin replied in a handwritten scrawl that he had "noted and talked" with the FBI liaison man about the missing documents on Jan. 14, 1964. Nonetheless, hundreds of internal memos were withheld from the commission.

The commission attorneys also suspected – correctly, it now turns out – that the FBI wasn't leveling with them about its contacts with the accused assassin, Lee Harvey Oswald.

One of them, Norman Redlich, now dean of the New York University SLaw School, discovered a startling omission in an FBI summary of the contents of Oswald's notebook. The FBI neglected to mention that one of its agents, James Hosty, was listed in the notebook.

This also disturbed another staff attorney, Howard Willens, who wrote Rankin in the strictest confidence on Feb. 13, 1964: "I share everyone's concern that this is a matter of great importance." He urged Rankin to demand a "full explanation" from the FBI.

A week later, Rankin wrote sternly to the late FBI director J. Edgar Hoover: "The Commission would like to be informed of the circumstances surrounding this omission," including the names of those who ordered it.

An outragewd Hoover fired back the astonishing explanation that Hosty's name was omitted because it wasn't needed by the commission as an investigative lead."

Added Hoover crisply, if not correctly: "This Bureau from the beginning of this investigation has developed and reported all available and relevatn facts and it will continue to do so."

Meanwhile, Dallas County's big, shaggy district attorney, Henry Wade, reported to the Warren Commission that he had heard Oswald was an FBI informant.

Inside FBI headquarters, Hoover exploded with rage. He scribbled some sizzling comments about Wade, a former FBI undercover agent, in the margins of memos which were never shown to the commission.

What he sent to the commission was a sworn, detailed affidavit denying that Oswald had ever been an FBI informant. But this didn't satisfy one staff attorney, Leon D. Hubert, Jr., who pointed out in a confidential memo:

"Mr. Hoover's affidavit ... covers his knowledge, but it can only do that. What about an affidavit of the head of the security division at headquarters, FBI, Washington? He should know who is or who is not an informant...

"It should be noted that payment in money is not the only way to engage an informant. I do not think there is any chicanery here; but for the sake of a perfect record, refuting the rumor, I make these comments."

Rankin tried to bring the conflict with Hoover to a head, as gently as possible, on March 26, 1964. Rankin praised the FBI chief for being "most cooperative," and then hit him with 30 blockbuster questions.

"What was the FBI evaluation of Oswald? ... Why did the FBI make three attempts within eight days (Oct. 29 to Nov. 5, 1963) to locate Oswald ? ... Were any further efforts made between Nov. 5 and Nov. 22 to locate Oswald, and if not, why not?"

Like bombs hitting around a target, the questions almost exploded the secrets that the FBI has buried for 12 years. But Hoover, if he knew that Oswald had delivered a threatening note to the FBI office in Dallas less than a week before assassinating President Kennedy, didn't reveal it to the Warren Commissiion.

"At the outset," wrote Hoover, "I wish to emphasize that the facts available to the FBI concerning Lee Harvey Oswald prior to the assassination did not indicate in any way that he was or would be a threat to President Kennedy ...

"In the absence of any information showing Oswald to be a possible threat to the President, there was no basis to inform the Secret Service concerning Oswald's presence or employment in Dallas."

We have had access at least to some of the material that the FBI suppressed. We have found nothing that would change the official verdict that Oswald, acting alone, gunned down President Kennedy.

The purpose of the coverup, apparently, was to spare the FBI any embarrassment.

Inside Labor
By Victor Riesel

Politics Rocked and Rolled: Kennedy Privately Told Labor Chiefs He's Out -- Positively Absolutely Won't Take Draft.

MILWAUKEE - Just down the street from my New York home is an all-night rock and roll theater adding a positive nowness touch to the old mid-Manhattan gold coast. As I was dashing for an early plane to this politically significant Midwest city, I passed the young theatergoers seeking early breadfast and singing the tunes of a new rock group called "F. Hubbard Humphrey."

Someone said something snide about "old father Hubbard ... has an empty political cupboard." But the crowd wasn't turned off. Actually among the liberal, new liberal or old Democratic regulars, few are turned off.

Some of those regulars, however, such as labor's George Meany and steelworkers' chief Abe Abel, first wanted to know just exactly what, and no fudging, are Sen. Edward Kennedy's real intentions.

So sometime before their national convention, Al Barkan, continent- hopping director of the AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education, was dispatched to see Ted Kennedy personally and privately. According to my source -- and there are few who are more intimate with the nation's most influential policymaking labor leaders -- Sen. Kennedy said: No. Flatly. Absolutely. Irrevocably.

Reportedly he told Barkan that no one could convince him to run and, in effect, if drafted and nominated for President, he wouldn't take it. This is not his moment. He wants to run for reelection. Period.

I trust my source. He never has been wrong. Not in the 20 years I've known him. I got no comment from Ted Kennedy's headquarters. One of the Senator's closest aides did point out that Ted has invited Al Barkan, some key union leaders and a handful of non-labor political people to a private breakfast July 22 at the Quality Inn Motel on Capitol Hill. There Kennedy had told them flatly that he was going to run for reelection and reelection only in '76 regardless of what the political conjurers smoked up.

Further, Kennedy said he planned to spend most of his time in Massachusetts from now on. There are many critical issues -- economic, social, health service, not to mention busing., And his people say these days nothing can be taken for granted.

Thus in effect Kennedy told the national labor chiefs twice -- don't do anything at your national gathering which would insinuate that I would run if drafted. And there are candidates who have his blessing. My source says that satisfied Meany, who rarely puts himself into a position of truly angering a man who might be President of the U. S. Criticism.. A definite break, no.

I've tried to contact Al Barkan, Mr. Labor Politics himself. But when I telephoned him last he was discussing vote-getting action with Indians in Arizona "four hours car ride from Phoenix."

Did Barkan's conversation with Kennedy and the message he took with him mean that labor finally considers Ted Kennedy definitely out in 1976.. My source says the answer is yes. And there's no hedging with "It's too early." That's what topside labor thinks. And what that force thinks means millions of votes and tens of millions of dollars.

Then will labor's favorite really be Hubert Humphrey - despite all the talk that of course he will be.. Nothing is certain with Hubert. Much will depend on how strongly Indiana's Sen. Birch Bayh comes out of presidential primaries such as those to be held in Wisconsin and New York on April 6. Especially since HHH won't be in any of the 33 pre-election delegation balloting.

One thing does seem clear -- most labor men are out to smash Sen. Scoop Jackson. Especially in New York. There a split labor movement has its favorites. But Jackson isn't one of them. And no matter what he does elsewhere, he'll break his political legs in one of the first laps if he doesn't ring up a big one in the April race in New York State.

There the labor split is between a powerful faction which is eager to put Gov. Hugh Carey, a devout Catholic, on the national ticket and a building and construction bloc which actually still is Republican and wants to neutralize the state Democratic and liberal forces.

The Democratic- labor coalition actually is fond of Hubert. And they talk wistfully about a Kennedy- Humphrey ticket or a Humphrey- Kennedy ticket. But they're in real- politik. They know they have to win convention delegates for someone -- and Humphrey isn't on the slate and Jackson is and they just don't like Jackson. So Carey seems a natural to them for second place.

Thus it is in many states. Actually COPE now is seeking ways and fronts with which to wade into the Democratic primaries though months ago Meany said labor never would get into the primary act. Nonetheless, my source says that there is much talk on labor's executive suite - laden "eighth floor" in the national AFL-CIO headquarters about making a fight for control of big blocs of convention delegates.

For two reasons: Meany is determined to put an outspoken and trusted friend in the White House. And "The Group" (a loose coalition of eight liberal unions) is meeting regularly to coordinate Democratic national nominating convention delegate selection primary fights in 20 states.And Meany and his high command aren't about to let it go by default as they did in 1972 when top labor chiefs went to Europe during the height of the California and New York primaries leaving Humphrey to flounder, penniless.

Thus, to labor's inner circle it now looks like a Kennedy- less campaign, but they still think they'll pick a winner.

CIRCUIT COURT

NEW MADRID — Joseph Hill of New Madrid Route One was granted probation under supervision when he pleaded guilty to burglary and stealing and was sentenced in three felony cases by Judge William L. Ragland.

On burglary and stealing charges stemming from a break-in on March 3 of the V.S. Wescoat home and theft of guns valued at $500, consecutive terms of four years on each charge in custody of the Department of Corrections were imposed against Hill before the probation was granted.

The same sentences were imposed on burglary and stealing charges against Hill in connection with a March 19 break-in and theft of a gun valued at $200 from the J. P. Williams home. The sentences in this case are to run concurrently with the prior sentences.

A four-year sentence to run concurrently with the two earlier cases was assessed on a feloniouis stealing charge in which Hill was accused of stealing a citizens band radio on June 26 that belonged to Monroe Davis.

Farmers Bank of Portageville was granted a $264.71 judgment, plus eight per cent interest, against Jessie Champion for delinquent taxes due on assigned special tax bills for payment of a proportionate part of the cost of construction of Sewer District No. 1 in the city of Portageville.

Esther L. Wilson of Phoenix, Ariz., received a judgment against Thomas T. Wilson of Sikeston for $50 per month per child for support of two children under the Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act.

Fifty-six For Freedom

A Series of Vignettes About the Fifty-six Signers of the Declaration of Independence. A Missouri Press Association Feature for the Bicentennial.

Edward Rutledge Jr.

The youngest to sign the Declaration of Independence was Edward Rutledge, 26, of South Carolina. He studied law in England and upon returning home, married the daughter of the colony's richest planter and received a dowry of 70,000 pounds. He was not eager to break ties with Great Britian and was described as an unpolished speaker. In June 1776, he was still undecided on how to vote for independence so, at his request, the vote was postponed until July. When the vote was called for on July 1, Rutledge refused to yield and South Carolina voted negatively. Realizing the resolution would probably carry, Rutledge persuaded the South Carolina delegates to submit to the will of the majority for the sake of unanimity. The votes were recast the next day and South Carolina voted for independence. During the war, Rutledge was captured and imprisoned at St. Augustine prison camp. For ten months he suffered privation and indignities until an exchange of prisoners could be arranged. His magnificent estate was devastated. Following the war he served 16 terms in the South Carolina legislature and as governor.

CIRCUIT COURT

NEW MADRID — Joseph Hill of New Madrid Route One was granted probation under supervision when he pleaded guilty to burglary and stealing and was sentenced in three felony cases by Judge William L. Ragland.

On burglary and stealing charges stemming from a break-in on March 3 of the V.S. Wescoat home and theft of guns valued at $500, consecutive terms of four years on each charge in custody of the Department of Corrections were imposed against Hill before the probation was granted.

The same sentences were imposed on burglary and stealing charges against Hill in connection with a March 19 break-in and theft of a gun valued at $200 from the J. P. Williams home. The sentences in this case are to run concurrently with the prior sentences.

A four-year sentence to run concurrently with the two earlier cases was assessed on a feloniouis stealing charge in which Hill was accused of stealing a citizens band radio on June 26 that belonged to Monroe Davis.

Farmers Bank of Portageville was granted a $264.71 judgment, plus eight per cent interest, against Jessie Champion for delinquent taxes due on assigned special tax bills for payment of a proportionate part of the cost of construction of Sewer District No. 1 in the city of Portageville.

Esther L. Wilson of Phoenix, Ariz., received a judgment against Thomas T. Wilson of Sikeston for $50 per month per child for support of two children under the Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act.

Study Shows Unfair Assessment In Every County

My recently completed study of assessments and assessment equity in Missouri tells a shocking story about our system of property taxation. The study paints a statistical picture indicating that there is almost no such thing as fair assessment of property in Missouri. Perhaps the most shocking of these statistics is one we computed for every county, called the "coefficient of dispersion."

The coefficient of dispersion serves as an index of assessment equity within each county. The easiest way to define this rather difficult statistic is by example.

Assuming the legal rate of property assessment is 33.3% of real value in money, let us take a look at the situation in Hypothetical County. Each home in Hypothetical County is worth exactly $30,000. Furthermore, each home in Hypothetical County is assessed for tax purposes at exactly 33.3% of its real value, or at $10,000. There is perfect equity — everybody is assessed at exactly the same rate. In this case, the coefficient of dispersion is zero.

Just east of Hypothetical County lies Imaginary County. There are 100 homes in Imaginary County. As in Hypothetical County, each home is worth exactly $30,000. Eighty of the homes are assessed for tax purposes at $10,000 (33.3% of real value). The remaining 20 homes are each assessed at $6,000 (20% of real value). As you can see, there is some inequity within the county. The coefficient of dispersion in this case is 13.93.

As these extremely simplified examples illustrate, the coefficient of dispersion indicates the tendency toward unfair assessment within a county. The higher the coefficient of dispersion rises, the less fair the system becomes. This raises the question: what is an acceptable coefficient of dispersion?

Of course, the ideal coefficient of dispersion is zero, which indicates absolute equity. But as a practical matter, this level of equity is impossible to obtain even in the best property assessment system (and as my study shows, Missouri's system is far from the best). As a general rule, experts in the assessment field use 15 as the cut-off point for coefficients of dispersion. If the coefficient in a county is 15 or less, there is an acceptable degree of equity. If the coefficient is more than 15, there are major problems and it is time to consider complete reassessment.

My study ranked the 114 counties and the City of St. Louis by coefficient of dispersion, and the results were disheartening. The best assessed county in the state, St. Louis County, has a coefficient of 18.2 (more than 3 points above the maximum "safe" level of equity). Only St. Louis, Boone and Cole counties have coefficients of less than 20. Sixty-five counties have coefficients greater than 40. St. Louis City (which, according to our study, ranks dead last in equity) has a coefficient of dispersion of 77.5.

I think this is the most important statistic in my study, because it demonstrates just how unfairly the individual taxpayer is being treated under our current assessment system. What these intolerably high coefficients of dispersion tell us is that no matter where you live in Missouri, there's a very good chance that you are paying property tax at a substantially higher or lower rate than your neighbor just down the block. A similar situation would exist if you were required to pay sales tax at 5 cents on the dollar, while your next door [illegible] cents on the dollar, but your neighbor across the street had to pay only 2 cents on the dollar. Obviously, you wouldn't stand for that.

I hope to work with the Legislature to correct these massive inequities, and I will more to say about that in the months ahead.

Bollinger stresses civic involvement

CHAFFEE — Dan Bollinger of the Missouri Division of Community Development stressed involvement on all levels in civic affairs as requirements for successful communities, when he spoke to the Chamber of Commerce recently.

Bollinger is past president and treasurer of the Chaffee chamber.

Louise Kielhofner reported that a moonlight madness sale has been scheduled from 5 to 9 p.m. Nov. 14. She also noted that a Christmas parade is scheduled Dec. 6. The crowning of Christmas royalty is planned for that day at 10 a.m. and the parade will start at 2 p.m. Christmas lights are expected to be up by Dec. 6.

Mrs. Kielhofner also reported she had received a letter from radio station KGMO of Cape Girardeau, offering the chamber 100 spot announcements of 30-seconds each for a cost of $112.50. The chamber voted to buy the radio spots.

Jim Chronister brought up a proposal that the Chamber donate $1,800 of dirt to the housing project to be used for landfill on the proposed 15-unit housing site. The proposal was approved by a slim margin.

Five new members were accepted into the chamber bringing total memebership to 96. The new members are Richard Hodge, Bernadine Hinton, Terry Pourney and Mr. and Mrs. Greg Knutson.

Chamber president Wayne Crippen announced that new officers will be elected at the Nov. 20 meeting. NaMac Apparel, a new Chaffee business, would be in charge of the program for that meeting.

No December meeting is planned.

Study Shows Unfair Assessment In Every County

My recently completed study of assessments and assessment equity in Missouri tells a shocking story about our system of property taxation. The study paints a statistical picture indicating that there is almost no such thing as fair assessment of property in Missouri. Perhaps the most shocking of these statistics is one we computed for every county, called the "coefficient of dispersion."

The coefficient of dispersion serves as an index of assessment equity within each county. The easiest way to define this rather difficult statistic is by example.

Assuming the legal rate of property assessment is 33.3% of real value in money, let us take a look at the situation in Hypothetical County. Each home in Hypothetical County is worth exactly $30,000. Furthermore, each home in Hypothetical County is assessed for tax purposes at exactly 33.3% of its real value, or at $10,000. There is perfect equity — everybody is assessed at exactly the same rate. In this case, the coefficient of dispersion is zero.

Just east of Hypothetical County lies Imaginary County. There are 100 homes in Imaginary County. As in Hypothetical County, each home is worth exactly $30,000. Eighty of the homes are assessed for tax purposes at $10,000 (33.3% of real value). The remaining 20 homes are each assessed at $6,000 (20% of real value). As you can see, there is some inequity within the county. The coefficient of dispersion in this case is 13.93.

As these extremely simplified examples illustrate, the coefficient of dispersion indicates the tendency toward unfair assessment within a county. The higher the coefficient of dispersion rises, the less fair the system becomes. This raises the question: what is an acceptable coefficient of dispersion?

Of course, the ideal coefficient of dispersion is zero, which indicates absolute equity. But as a practical matter, this level of equity is impossible to obtain even in the best property assessment system (and as my study shows, Missouri's system is far from the best). As a general rule, experts in the assessment field use 15 as the cut-off point for coefficients of dispersion. If the coefficient in a county is 15 or less, there is an acceptable degree of equity. Social Security answers

What is a supplier in Medicare?

Q. I visited the Social Security office during the first week of last month. It was really busy, and I had to wait quite a while before I got to talk to someone. Is the office always so busy?

A. Usually, Social Security offices are busiest on the first few days of the week and during the first two weeks of the month. Unless your business is urgent, the best time to visit the office is at the end of the week or during the last half of the month. And it's a good idea to call the office first. Often, business can be handled by phone and you won't have to make a trip.

Q. I started getting Social Security student benefits this month. I work part time and know my earnings can affect my monthly payments, but does this include earnings I had before my benefits started?

A. Yes. In determining your Social Security benefits for the year, earnings for the entire year are counted. This includes months before your benefits begin, as well as months after your benefits end. If you earn over $2,520 for the year, your benefits will be reduced $1 for each $2 over $2,520. But no matter how much you earn for the year, you can get your full Social Security benefit for any month in which you neither earn over $210 nor do substantial work in your own business.

Q. My brother was severely injured in a boating accident two months ago. He hasn't applied for disability benefits yet because he says there's a five-month waiting period. When should he file?

A. Even though there is a five-month waiting period before disability benefits can begin, people should apply for benefits as soon as they become disabled. By filing early, the claim may be completely processed during the waiting period and benefits can begin at the earliest possible time – for the sixth full month of disability.

Q. I'm ready to send in my first medical insurance claim under Medicare, but I don't know where to send it. How can I find out?

A. Unless you are entitled to Medicare under the Railroad Retirement system, you should send your medical insurance claim to the Medicare carrier for the state where you received the services. The name and address are listed in Your Medicare Handbook. If you're getting Medicare under the Railroad Retirement system, you should send your claim to The Travelers Insurance Co. office nearest your home.

Q. My brother told me that Medicare's medical insurance pays for the services of suppliers. What is a supplier?

A. A supplier is a person or organization -- other than a doctor or health care facility – that furnished equipment or services covered by Medicare medical insurance. For example, ambulance firms, independent laboratories, and pharmacists and organizations that rent or sell medical equipment are considered suppliers.

Survey held to measure water wells level

ROLLA — The Water Resources Division of the U.S. Geological Survey has begun an intensive two-week program to measure ground-water levels in the Southeast Lowlands.

About 600 wells will be included in the water-level network which will be part of the ground-water data collection program for the evaluation of the water resources of the Southeast Lowlands. The measurements will be used to construct a current water table map of the alluvial aquifer.

By comparing the 1975 map with similar maps made in 1956 and 1965, any long-term trends in water levels can be observed. the measurements made this fall will also be the basis for determining the natural recharge areas of the aquifer during the coming winter.

The three-year study of the water resources of the Southeast Lowlands started Oct. 6 and is a cooperative project between the Division of Geology and Land Survey, Department of Natural Resources, and the U.S Geological Survey. Staffs of both agencies are involved in the overall study.

The activities of the Missouri Geological Survey and Water Resources are now carried out within the Division of Geology and Land Survey.

The 4,000-square mile study area includes all of Dunklin, Mississippi, New Madrid, Pemiscot, Scott and Stoddard counties and parts of Bollinger, Butler, Cape Girardeau, Ripley and Wayne counties.

The study, which was prompted by the rapid irrigation development in the last 15 years. will provide quantitative information on the potential for future development of the ground-water system for agriculture and industry.

The study is being made under the direction of Wallace B. Howe, director and state geologist, Division of Geology and Land Survey, and Anthony Homyk, district chief, U.S. Geological Survey, Water Resources Division. The field party consists of L. F. Emmett, E. J. Harvey, R. R. Luckey, G. B. Malone, W. S. Oakes and H. L. Reed. The cooperation of the farmers in the area is appreciated by the field party.

Sen. Eagleton introduces bill on bond issues

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., introduced a bill Tuesday to require state and local governments to register new bond issues with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Municipalities and states to offer bonds would, then, be brought under the same scrutiny by the SEC in terms of financial disclosure and fiscal responsibility as are corporations seeking to offer new stock, Eagleton said.

Government authorities which issue tax-exempt bonds were exempted from the registration provisions of the Securities Act of 1933, which established the SEC. Eagleton's bill would remove that exemption.

"A corporation seeking to issue new stock or bonds must meet a rigid set of requirements for accuracy and consistency in its reporting of financial data," Eagleton said.

"The company's books must be submitted to an independent auditor, and the information supplied in a formal registration filed with the SEC.

"State and local governments are subject to less stringent requirements when they seek to place a bond offering.

"If municipal bonds were registered with the SEC, the many well-run states and communities would be better able to justify their high credit ratings. At the same time, any bond-issuer who was manipulating figures to show a balanced budget would be exposed.

"Good issues could be more easily differentiated from bad issues, and fiscally responsible state and local governments might then see their prudence rewarded by lower interest rates."

Eagleton said the situation faced currently by New York City and, down the line, by other local and state governments, is similar to the corporate situation of the 1920s and '30s when the collapse of many corporate securities of dubious merit led to the creation of the SEC.

"I believe that this is a constructive way of avoiding future situations such as we are facing today with New York City," Eagleton said of his bill.

The amount of energy the earth receives constantly from the sun is some 167,000 times more than the energy now used by all the world's countries.

If you're getting Medicare under the Railroad Retirement system, you should send your claim to The Travelers Insurance Co. office nearest your home.

Q. My brother told me that Medicare's medical insurance pays for the services of suppliers. What is a supplier?

A. A supplier is a person or organization -- other than a doctor or health care facility – that furnished equipment or services covered by Medicare medical insurance. For example, ambulance firms, independent laboratories, and pharmacists and organizations that rent or sell medical equipment are considered suppliers.

Survey held to measure water wells level

ROLLA — The Water Resources Division of the U.S. Geological Survey has begun an intensive two-week program to measure ground-water levels in the Southeast Lowlands.

About 600 wells will be included in the water-level network which will be part of the ground-water data collection program for the evaluation of the water resources of the Southeast Lowlands. The measurements will be used to construct a current water table map of the alluvial aquifer.

By comparing the 1975 map with similar maps made in 1956 and 1965, any long-term trends in water levels can be observed. the measurements made this fall will also be the basis for determining the natural recharge areas of the aquifer during the coming winter.

The three-year study of the water resources of the Southeast Lowlands started Oct. 6 and is a cooperative project between the Division of Geology and Land Survey, Department of Natural Resources, and the U.S Geological Survey. Staffs of both agencies are involved in the overall study.

The activities of the Missouri Geological Survey and Water Resources are now carried out within the Division of Geology and Land Survey.

The 4,000-square mile study area includes all of Dunklin, Mississippi, New Madrid, Pemiscot, Scott and Stoddard counties and parts of Bollinger, Butler, Cape Girardeau, Ripley and Wayne counties.

The study, which was prompted by the rapid irrigation development in the last 15 years. will provide quantitative information on the potential for future development of the ground-water system for agriculture and industry.

The study is being made under the direction of Wallace B. Howe, director and state geologist, Division of Geology and Land Survey, and Anthony Homyk, district chief, U.S. Geological Survey, Water Resources Division. The field party consists of L. F. Emmett, E. J. Harvey, R. R. Luckey, G. B. Malone, W. S. Oakes and H. L. Reed. The cooperation of the farmers in the area is appreciated by the field party.

Sen. Eagleton introduces bill on bond issues

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., introduced a bill Tuesday to require state and local governments to register new bond issues with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Municipalities and states to offer bonds would, then, be brought under the same scrutiny by the SEC in terms of financial disclosure and fiscal responsibility as are corporations seeking to offer new stock, Eagleton said.

Government authorities which issue tax-exempt bonds were exempted from the registration provisions of the Securities Act of 1933, which established the SEC. Eagleton's bill would remove that exemption.

"A corporation seeking to issue new stock or bonds must meet a rigid set of requirements for accuracy and consistency in its reporting of financial data," Eagleton said.

"The company's books must be submitted to an independent auditor, and the information supplied in a formal registration filed with the SEC.

"State and local governments are subject to less stringent requirements when they seek to place a bond offering.

"If municipal bonds were registered with the SEC, the many well-run states and communities would be better able to justify their high credit ratings. At the same time, any bond-issuer who was manipulating figures to show a balanced budget would be exposed.

"Good issues could be more easily differentiated from bad issues, and fiscally responsible state and local governments might then see their prudence rewarded by lower interest rates."

Eagleton said the situation faced currently by New York City and, down the line, by other local and state governments, is similar to the corporate situation of the 1920s and '30s when the collapse of many corporate securities of dubious merit led to the creation of the SEC.

"I believe that this is a constructive way of avoiding future situations such as we are facing today with New York City," Eagleton said of his bill.

The amount of energy the earth receives constantly from the sun is some 167,000 times more than the energy now used by all the world's countries.

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A group of Israeli citizens has launched a tongue-in-cheek fund-raising campaign to buy Egyptian President Anwar Sadat a transistor radio.

Sadat told the National Press Club in Washington on Monday that until the early 1950s, Jews controled the Egyptian economy. He said in 1952 he was unable to buy a radio because he fought against Israel and "all of the dealers were in the hands of Jews."

In today's newspapers, Eliahu Tal placed an advertisement sponsored by the ficticious "Israeli-Egyptian Friendship League" which said, "We will send Sadat a very good radio, the best made in Israel, so he can listen to all wavelengths."

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Cynthia Larson stepped out of her shower, opened the bathroom door and saw two men in her bedroom. She closed the bathroom door, put on a robe and then walked out to greet the Secret Service.

"One guy was in my bedroom closet, down on his knees, crawling around. Another guy was in the linen closet peering around. They never said a thing," said the 22-year-old daughter of former state Democratic Chairman Clif Larson.

Her father is using their home as Arizona Rep. Morris Udall's presidential campaign headquarters in Iowa, and the agents were checking things out for an organizational meeting to be held there.

Miss Larson said there were other men in her room as she emerged from her shower.

"Somebody handed me a bunch of Udall balloons to put up outside. That's really kind of funny, because I support (former Oklahoma Sen.) Fred Harris," she said.

CHICAGO (AP) — Cook County Democrats have voted unanimously to endorse Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson as their party's 1976 presidential nominee. The party's executive committee urged the Illnois Democrat to seek the nomination and to enter Illinois and other primaries.

Stevenson was a state legislator and state treasurer before being elected to the Senate in 1972.

The top Democrat in Cook County is Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, wh has been visited by several announced Democratic candidates but who has not given his support to any of them.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Former South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Cao Ky has blamed former U.S. Ambassador Graham Martin for hastening the collapse of the South Vietnamese government.

Ky told a Tuesday news conference at the University of Alabama that Martin "trusted the French and the Communists too much."

He said America has a bad conscience about Vietnam and wants to forget the political situation in Southeast Asia.

"Vietnam was the first defeat for America, and government officials particularly want to try and forget about it," he said.

Ky added that errors by American officials and My Laitype atrocities by both sides in the war still have not been made public.

Kiwanians view Bicentennial slide program

A Bicentennial slide program, titled "This is Our Country", was presented by Carl Muench at Tuesday night's Kiwanis Club meeting at the El Capri Motel.

Muench and his wife compiled the program form slides they have taken over the past 15 years of interesting places throughout the country. Taped music accompanied the slides, along with actual comments by presidents taken from record books.

The program depicted the growth of the country since George Washington.

A contest was conducted among members to guess the weight of the huge rock placed at the George Kirk Memorial at the city recreational facility. The rock will contain a plaque honoring Kirk. Earl Jewell won the contest by guessing the weight to be 6,500 pounds. The actual weight of the rock is 6,382 pounds.

Following the meeting, board members voted to designate the Farmers Recognition Banquet, scheduled Nov. 11, as a regular meeting of the Kiwanis Club.

Two resign from Chaffee police

CHAFFEE — Police Chief Elmer Trost and suspended Patrolman Charles Benson have resigned from the Chaffee Police Department, Mayor Robert Capshaw said Tuesday.

The mayor reported Trost resigned Thursday and Benson, after conferring with an attorney, decided Saturday to take the option of resigning.

The patrolman, formerly of Jackson, had a number of charges brought against him by Trost. He appeared before the City Council Oct. 20 when the council heard his testimony and that of Trost and other officers.

Benson's employment was terminated Monday. Mayor Capshaw said, while Trost was given permission to work "spasmodically, on a day-to-day temporary basis" as a patrolman until he begins another job.

"Elmer Trost is a fine and gentle young man. It is my understanding that he has a degree in accounting and has accepted a position with a Cape Girardeau firm," the mayor said, in a written statement.

Sgt. David Townsend has been appointed acting police chief until it is decided whether to make him the permanent chief or appoint a new one, the mayor explained. Another patrolman reported for work Saturday as a full-time officer.

Trost replaced Jimmy Dale Coats as police chief in April.

The mayor said he would work closely with the police personnel board in determining what should be done concerning the police position. "We're going to make a real dedicated effort to upgrade the police department here," he mayor stated.

He said he was hopeful police could soon receive higher salaries and a quota of officers be set. The mayor said he would also like to see a couple of reserve officers hired.

Neither Trost nor Benson could be reached for comment, but the mayor stressed that at least the chief's resignation did not stem from any personal animosity.

Mayor Capshaw said that all charges against Benson, including breach of discipline, unprofessionalism, incompatability with other officers and conduct unbecoming a police officer, were dropped. The mayor had offered to let the patrolman resign earlier, but the patrolman had insisted on the hearing before the council.

Bankers group endorses law limiting charges

WASHINGTON — The American Bankers Association has endorsed proposed legislation that would prohibit merchants from adding extra charges to the cost of an item or service solely because the customer used a credit card as the method of payment.

Kenneth V. Larkin, vice chairman of the ABA Bank Card division, testifying before the consumer affairs subcommittee of the House Committee on Banking, Currency and Housing, stated that the proposal is a necessary legislative directive that would prevent an increase in the cost of credit for millions of persons.

The legislative proposal as introduced by subcommittee chairman Frank Annunzio, D.-Ill., following other congressional hearings where some support was indicated for a legislative authorization of the surcharge on purchases made with bank cards.

"Surcharges would cause major changes in buying habits and dramatically decrease the use of bank cards and undermine the future of the bank card industry," Larkin told the ocngressmen. Larkin is the senior vice president of Bank of America at San Francisco.

The banker observed that data available on the economic effect of bank cards indicates that the use of the cards does not penalize cash customers since there are many advantages to the merchant who accepts the cards.

The ABA also urged subcommittee members to reconsider the cash discount provision of the Fair Credit Billing Act and to institute repeal of the provision if Congress determines that merchandise costs remain comparable with or without the presence of bank cards.

Larkin stated that the amount of discount for cash payment would bring merchants into violation of usury or consumer loan rate limitation statutes in many states.

Because these regultions become effective next week and would subject many to legal suits for violation of state usury law, legislative relief from this problem must be immediate, Larkin concluded.

Hair dyes:

They may cause cancer

Can the chemicals in hair-coloring products give you cancer?

Last March Dr. Bruce Ames, from the University of California in Berkeley, reported that certain hair dye ingredients produced mutations in a specially structured strain of salmonella in his laboratories.

On the basis of his results, Dr. Ames concluded that the materials might be carcinogenic — cancer causing — in humans. His report appeared in Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

A short time after Dr. Ames disclosed his work, researchers in England reported that their research led them to draw conclusions similar to those of Ames.

Since the first reports raising the possibility of a cancer link to hair dyes, a number of additional studies have been completed and are in the process of being published in professional journals.

In a press conference in New York Friday, Dr. John F. Corbett reviewed the new evidence on the possible carcinogenic effect of hair dyes.

"The new studies," he said, "confirm earlier studies that show no evidence of carcinogenic or mutagenic effects when animals are exposed to hair dyes," he said.

The tests included feeding hair dye in with the regular diet of dogs for two years. No blood abnormalities or anything of the sort developed.

"The dogs' urine was the color of the dye," Dr. Corbett said.

Dr. Corbett, a scientist for the $200 million-a-year hair-coloring industry, said:

"The new evidence affirms our confidence that there is no evidence that hair dyes pose a hazard to the user."

Dr. Corbett is head of the Hair Coloring Technical Committee of the Cosmetic, Toiletry and Fragrance Association.

Despite the new reports the controversy continues. So as far as doubters in the scientific community are concerned, the jury still is out.

Even the hair-coloring industry is pressing on with further research aimed at determining once and for all that hair dye is completely safe for the 20 per cent of the population that uses it — including some males. No one can say that with absolute certainty.

Dr. Corbett said one in three adult women use some hair-coloring product. The hair dye and cancer scare last March didn't frighten the consumers, so far as the industry can ascertain.

Jack Shor, a spokesman for the industry and a vice president at Clairol, told me:

"Industry sales are up 14 per cent — and even when adjusted for inflation shows more women are using hair-coloring products than before the scare."

Not only were a few of the steady users pooh-poohing the report but novices also tended to ignore the possible cancer link when reaching for the hair dye for the first time.

The tests that showed possible ill effects of some chemicals in hair dye are called test tube screening procedures — a kind of chemical shortcut to find out if certain things just might be bad for humans.

As a short cut it can get some kind of answer much faster than would be done the conventional way — using animals.

The test tube screening methods such as that used by Dr. Ames and the researchers in Japan and England also are under fire in some scientific circles.

The expert panel of the World Health Organization has concluded that "vitro mutagenicity tests alone cannot yield definitive results applicable to man." It was referring to the methods used by Ames and the others raising questions about hair dye and its safety for humans.

In Medical World News last May, Dr. Samuel Epstein commented on the same Ames' test.

"Over the past 20 years about 15 of these short term tests for carcinogens have been introduced, including a few of my own.

"All of them have gotten a lot of publicity initially, but with the lapse of time, the reliability of each has been thrown into question.

"I'm not arguing with Dr. Ames' test. It's beautiful science but I think it's being touted as doing more than it actually can," Dr. Epstein said.

The new research involving hair dye chemicals relative to cancer includes:

In the research Corbett discussed, hair dye chemicals were painted, injected into and painted on the skins of animals.

"We understand these tests have not raised any cause for concern," Dr. Corbett said.

He concluded:

Questions concerning the safety of hair dyes continue to be based entirely on bacterial screening tests and unsubstantiated epidemiological speculations.

In contrast, a considerable amount of safety data relating to lifetime animal studies cannot be ignored — nor can the retrospective studies which show no evidence of an increase in cancer correlatable with the level of hair dye usage.

Would he mind if his wife dyed her hair?

"Not at all," he said.

Clothing dollars can be stretched

By JEWEL GRADY

The economic trend has caused people to take a look at their spending patterns. Few people want to waste money on things that quickly become useless. Many are looking for money savers on ways to stretch the clothing dollar.

There are several ideas one might consider for being fashionable for less money:

1. Take the time to shop carefully. Be selective in workmanship and quality of fabric in both home sewing and ready-to-wear garment fabric. Buy the best garment you can afford that will fit into your way of life.
2. Make use of that leftover fashion from past seasons. (recycle).
3. Don't let buttons, snaps and zippers from an old garment get thrown away. (Recycle).
4. Buy fabric that stands on its own ... one which does not require linings and under linings.
5. Pick up remnants whenever possible — they are super buys for small projects and accessories.
6. Buy sewing staples, thread, zippers and buttons in standard colors when they are on sale.
7. Sew your own exciting accessories -- scarves, hats, bags. The idea is a practical way to use left-over fabric from a big project.
8. Make use of left-over decorator fabric. They make beautiful tote bags and handbags.
9. Make use of durable press sheets. They have become a fashion item. A regular full size sheet is said to have seven yards of fabric; hence it is less expensive than most yard goods. It is ideal for robes and housedresses.

Beef prices drop again

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Beef prices at the retail level dropped off this week after a week of general rises while pork and chicken prices continued to be mixed, according to the weekly marketbasket survey of the Missouri Farm Bureau.

A pound of sirloin steak recorded the largest decline, falling nine cents to $2.02. Round steak fell four cents a pound to $1.89 and T-bone steak was down three cents a pound to $2.31.

While arm roast and ground beef remained steady at $1.34 and 81 cents a pound respectively, rib steak rose four cents a pound to $1.89 and blade roast was up a penny to $1.03 a pound.

A butt portion of ham was up a nickel to $1.35 a pound and a shank portion rose two cents to $1.21 a pound. Pork steak was up four cents to $1.53 a pound, but center cut chops fell eight cents to $1.97 and pork blade roast was down seven cents to $1.40.

Whole fryer chickens remained steady at 56 cents a pound and cut up parts rose a penny to 63 cents a pound.

A gallon of whole milk was up three cents to $1.52 and 2 per cent rose four cents to $1.45.

A dozen grade A eggs were generally up with large four cents more at 72 cents and medium a penny higher at 67 cents. Extra large remained steady however, at 75 cents.

A 1½ pound loaf of white bread fell four cents to 57 cents and 10 pounds of cane sugar was down the same to $1.47. Potatoes in the 10 pound bag rose nine cents to $1.47.

Ann Landers

Boyish-appearing girls deserve rough treatment

Dear Ann Landers: I would like to comment on that letter written by a teenage girl who complained about the terrible manners of the teenage boys in her school. She gave as an example the way the boys shoved the girls around and elbowed in front of them to get a seat on the school bus.

Our children are grown but in "my day" (I know how teenagers hate this phrase) we had no such problem. Why? Because boys looked like boys and girls looked like girls and they behaved like young ladies.

Today almost every girl I see looks like "one of the guys" in her jeans or overalls or hip-huggers, denim shirt, battle jacket and cowboy belt. After all, Ann, when a girl looks like "one of the guys" she shouldn't be surprised if she is treated like one. If I'm wrong, tell me. If I'm right, tell THEM. -- Female Of Yesteryear

Dear Yester: Your point is well taken but I'm sure thousands of teenagers out there are just aching to provide a rebuttal to your letter. I'll print the best one.

Dear Ann Landers: Thank God for you column. Until I read your statement that silicone injections were illegal, I didn't know it. A girlfriend of mine has been getting them for several weeks and I was considering some for myself. I am 18 years old and very flat-chested.

Will you please tell me which of the bust developers (creams and exercisers) advertised in the magazines are best? Also, where can I find out about those silicone implants? - Flat And Uninformed

Dear F: The creams and so-called "bust developers" you see advertised in magazines are a crock of cranberries. The only people who profit from them are the manufacturers. Their dimensions DO increase - around the bank balance.

As forthe silicone implants, ask your family doctor to recommend a plastic surgeon who does this type of work. Or write to the head of the department of surgery at a university medical school. Silicone implants are legal, safe and thousands of women have been very pleased with the results.

Dear Ann Landers: Last night our handsome, bright, 18-year-old son told my husband he is gay and we must accept him as he is because he has no desire to be anything else and is tired of pretending.

Is there any chance that this could be a passing fancy? Is it possible that our boy will outgrow this phase and end up falling in love with some nice girl?

We see a life of misery ahead for him and plenty of heartache for us.

Please, Ann, no city or state. I am afraid to sign this. Just print my letter and your answer. - His Mother

Dear Mother: Anything is possible, but it is highly unlikely that an 18-year-old boy who makes such an announcement has any interest in changing from homosexuality to heterosexuality.

His life might not be as miserable as you think. Some gays do well in their chosen fields and are quite content. You and your husband, however, should seek counseling since you are the ones who are suffering from anxiety. Unless you have a better understanding of your son's homosexuality and learn how to accept it, you ARE going to have plenty of heartache.

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers's booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50 cents in coin with yourreqeust and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Girl Scouts turn Boy Scouts down

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Girl Scouts voted today to remain an all-female organization.

By a show of hands, 1,800 delegates to the 40th national convention of the Girl Scouts of America overwhelmingly refused to return a good turn by the Boy Scouts of America.

The Boy Scouts voted last year to admit girls aged 14 to 21 to their Explorer division.

The two groups are not affiliated.

At a session Monday, the delegates plus 2,700 visitors and other guests — young, middleaged and old, but all Girl Scouts — discussed whether membership should include boys.

By the clapping and cheering for those who opposed the idea, it was doomed from the start.

The delegates were to vote later in the day on whether a mini-scout program should be started for children under six.

Booklet tells how to gain value from food stamps

If you shop with food stamps, you know just how important they are in keeping your family well-fed.

To help you get more value out of your food stamps, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has published a new booklet, "Shopping with Food Stamps." For a single free copy, write to Consumer Information, Dept. 56, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

The booklet includes the following pointers:

. You can use food stamps at any store authorized to take them. Look for the "We Accept Food Coupons" sign or ask a store clerk if food stamps are accepted.

. Always carry the food stamps identification card you received when you were certified for the food stamp program. You need to show this card at the checkout counter or your food stamps will not be accepted.

. Remember that food stamps can only be used for food or for the seeds and plants to grow food. Food stamps cannot be used for pet food, soap, cigarettes, paper goods or alcoholic beverages. These items must be paid for in cash.

. To speed things up at the checkout counter, separate your food stamp purchases from items you will be paying for with cash.

Hair dyes:

They may cause cancer

Can the chemicals in hair-coloring products give you cancer?

Last March Dr. Bruce Ames, from the University of California in Berkeley, reported that certain hair dye ingredients produced mutations in a specially structured strain of salmonella in his laboratories.

On the basis of his results, Dr. Ames concluded that the materials might be carcinogenic — cancer causing — in humans. His report appeared in Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

A short time after Dr. Ames disclosed his work, researchers in England reported that their research led them to draw conclusions similar to those of Ames.

Since the first reports raising the possibility of a cancer link to hair dyes, a number of additional studies have been completed and are in the process of being published in professional journals.

In a press conference in New York Friday, Dr. John F. Corbett reviewed the new evidence on the possible carcinogenic effect of hair dyes.

"The new studies," he said, "confirm earlier studies that show no evidence of carcinogenic or mutagenic effects when animals are exposed to hair dyes," he said.

The tests included feeding hair dye in with the regular diet of dogs for two years. No blood abnormalities or anything of the sort developed.

"The dogs' urine was the color of the dye," Dr. Corbett said.

Dr. Corbett, a scientist for the $200 million-a-year hair-coloring industry, said:

"The new evidence affirms our confidence that there is no evidence that hair dyes pose a hazard to the user."

Dr. Corbett is head of the Hair Coloring Technical Committee of the Cosmetic, Toiletry and Fragrance Association.

Despite the new reports the controversy continues. So as far as doubters in the scientific community are concerned, the jury still is out.

Local woman is named college queen candidate

Rebecca Williams

WALNUT RIDGE, Ark. — Rebecca Rae Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Williams, 435 Coleman St., Sikeston, Mo., recently was selected to be a candidate for Miss Southern Baptist College. Homecoming activities will be Nov. 4.

Miss Williams is a 1975 graduate of Sikeston High School and is a freshman taking pre-nursing courses at Southern Baptist College.

Liberated women prefer men with medium builds

CHICAGO (AP) — If you are a former 100-pound weakling who went to body-building school to impress your girl, just hope she isn't the liberated type.

A recent Loyola University study has found that women, particularly the "liberated" ones, prefer men of mediumthin, linear builds over the Charles Atlas types.

"The most preferred physique was that of a medium-appearing male with a slight tapering physique, but nothing to the extent of the muscle-man physique with the massive chest and arms," said Paul Lavrakas of Loyola's applied social psychology program.

"Women who described themselves in liberated terms and who led more liberated lifestyles had a preference for thinner, more linear physiques, whereas women who saw themselves in more traditional feminine roles liked more massive torsos — the typical muscle-man," Lavrakas said.

He spent some two years conducting the study, which involved 70 women from 18 to 30, most of whom were single and from an urban, middle-class background. He said many more of the women described themselves as liberated than as traditionally feminine.

The most unappealing physique: "A pear-shaped body, the kind with a heavy lower trunk and medium upper trunk or medium lower and thin upper," Lavrakas said.

But the whole question of physique may be unimportant to the preening male anyway. For all his efforts to determine female preferences in male bodies, Lavrakas said that ultimately they mean little in terms of choosing friends and lovers.

Perfect pies for Fall

By CHERIE BLANTON

When winter sets in I get all those kitchen urges and juices just stirring around in me like crazy. And one of the first things I get busy doing is making pies. Here is a new one I tried and really liked. But let me give you a word of warning, it is strictly rich and really really chocolately. If you're not a dark chocolate fan, leave this one alone.

CHOCOLATE PECAN PIE

Crust:

Press one-fourth cup chopped pecans firmly into bottom of a nine-inch unbaked pie shell.

Filling:

In a large bowl, combine three-fourth cup dark corn syrup, three eggs, one-half teaspoon salt and one and a half teaspoons vanilla and beat well with a spoon.

Slowly add one and a half cups of semisweet chocolate pieces, melted. Beat until blended and then add three-fourths cup pecan halves and pour into pie shell. Bake on lowest rack in preheated 350 degree oven about 30 minutes. Serve warm topped with whipped cream or ice cream.

I swear to you on my Fanny Farmer cookbook that if you follow these recipes exactly as I give them to you, (that means timing them like I say), you will put the m ost perfect pies in your mouth that you have ever eaten. If you don't believe me --just try it!

CREAM PIE

¼ cup cornstarch
Two-thirds cup sugar
¼ tsp. salt
2 cups milk, scalded
3 slightly beaten egg yolks
2 Tbsp. oleo
½ tsp vanilla
1 baked 9-inch pie shell

Mix cornstarch, sugar and salt; gradually add scalded milk. Cook over moderate heat, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and boils. Cook two minutes; remove from heat.

Add small amount to egg yolks; stir into remaining hot mixture. Cook one minute, stirring constantly. Add butter and vanilla; cool slightly. Pour into baked pastry shell. Cool and make a meringue with the egg whites. Or, do as I do, and cover top with one-half pint of plain whipped cream. Refrigerate.

VARIATIONS OF CREAM PIE

Banana: Slice three bananas in shell; add above filling.

Butterscotch: Substitute one cup brown sugar for two-thirds cup granulated sugar and increase butter to three tablespoons.

Caramel: Caramelize one-fourth cup of the sugar. Gradually add scalded milk; mix well.

Chocolate: Increase sugar to one cup; melt two, one-ounce squares unsweetened chocolate in scalded milk.

Coconut: Add one cup moist, shredded coconut to filling. Sprinkle one-half cup of coconut over meringue before browning, or over whipped cream.

Pineapple: Add one-half thoroughly drained, crushed pineapple to cooled filling.

PECAN PIE

½ cup sugar
¼ cup butter
1 cup light corn syrup
¼ tsp. salt
3 eggs
1 cup pecans
1 9-inch unbaked pie shell

Cream sugar and butter; add syrup and salt and beat well. Beat in eggs, one at a time; add pecans. Pour into shell and bake at 350 degrees for one hour and 10 minutes, or til knife inserted comes out clean.

Car wax your glass fiber tub

DEAR POLLY — In our brand new house we have a glass fiber bathtub but we do not know how to clean it. We have used some cleansers that did no good and then heard of using lemon oil but that was no better. Can you help me? Thank you. — MRS. R.B.A.

DEAR MRS. R.B.A. — I was advised that one should never clean a tub such as yours with an abrasive cleanser but use a non-abrasive bathroom cleanser. Also, apply a coat of car wax about twice a year to restore the original luster. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — When preparing new potatoes for cooking, especially those from your own garden, do not scrape or peel but rub them briskly, under running water, with a clean plastic chore ball. This really works. — MRS. A.B.

DEAR POLLY — I think Mrs. S.K. can remove the spaghetti sauce stains from her wallpaper (provided it has a protective coating) and high chair by using a cut lemon if she has not tried anything else first. Lemon works on all sorts of fruit and vegetable stains if applied BEFORE soap and water. Drop the lemon juice on the spot and then wash as usual. (Test an inconspicuous spot first.) — M.T.A.

WALNUT RIDGE, Ark. — Rebecca Rae Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Williams, 435 Coleman St., Sikeston, Mo., recently was selected to be a candidate for Miss Southern Baptist College. Homecoming activities will be Nov. 4.

Miss Williams is a 1975 graduate of Sikeston High School and is a freshman taking pre-nursing courses at Southern Baptist College.

Liberated women prefer men with medium builds

CHICAGO (AP) — If you are a former 100-pound weakling who went to body-building school to impress your girl, just hope she isn't the liberated type.

A recent Loyola University study has found that women, particularly the "liberated" ones, prefer men of mediumthin, linear builds over the Charles Atlas types.

"The most preferred physique was that of a medium-appearing male with a slight tapering physique, but nothing to the extent of the muscle-man physique with the massive chest and arms," said Paul Lavrakas of Loyola's applied social psychology program.

"Women who described themselves in liberated terms and who led more liberated lifestyles had a preference for thinner, more linear physiques, whereas women who saw themselves in more traditional feminine roles liked more massive torsos — the typical muscleman," Lavrakas said.

He spent some two years conducting the study, which involved 70 women from 18 to 30, most of whom were single and from an urban, middle-class background. He said many more of the women described themselves as liberated than as traditionally feminine.

The most unappealing physique: "A pear-shaped body, the kind with a heavy lower trunk and medium upper trunk or medium lower and thin upper," Lavrakas said.

But the whole question of physique may be unimportant to the preening male anyway. For all his efforts to determine female preferences in male bodies, Lavrakas said that ultimately they mean little in terms of choosing friends and lovers.

Perfect pies for Fall

By CHERIE BLANTON

When winter sets in I get all those kitchen urges and juices just stirring around in me like crazy. And one of the first things I get busy doing is making pies. Here is a new one I tried and really liked. But let me give you a word of warning, it is strictly rich and really really chocolately. If you're not a dark chocolate fan, leave this one alone.

CHOCOLATE PECAN PIE

Crust:

Press one-fourth cup chopped pecans firmly into bottom of a nine-inch unbaked pie shell.

Filling:

In a large bowl, combine three-fourth cup dark corn syrup, three eggs, one-half teaspoon salt and one and a half teaspoons vanilla and beat well with a spoon.

Slowly add one and a half cups of semisweet chocolate pieces, melted. Beat until blended and then add three-fourths cup pecan halves and pour into pie shell. Bake on lowest rack in preheated 350 degree oven about 30 minutes. Serve warm topped with whipped cream or ice cream.

I swear to you on my Fanny Farmer cookbook that if you follow these recipes exactly as I give them to you, (that means timing them like I say), you will put the m ost perfect pies in your mouth that you have ever eaten. If you don't believe me --just try it!

CREAM PIE

¼ cup cornstarch
Two-thirds cup sugar
¼ tsp. salt
2 cups milk, scalded
3 slightly beaten egg yolks
2 Tbsp. oleo
½ tsp vanilla
1 baked 9-inch pie shell

Mix cornstarch, sugar and salt; gradually add scalded milk. Cook over moderate heat, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and boils. Cook two minutes; remove from heat.

Add small amount to egg yolks; stir into remaining hot mixture. Cook one minute, stirring constantly. Add butter and vanilla; cool slightly. Pour into baked pastry shell. Cool and make a meringue with the egg whites. Or, do as I do, and cover top with one-half pint of plain whipped cream. Refrigerate.

VARIATIONS OF CREAM PIE

Banana: Slice three bananas in shell; add above filling.

Butterscotch: Substitute one cup brown sugar for two-thirds cup granulated sugar and increase butter to three tablespoons.

Caramel: Caramelize one-fourth cup of the sugar. Gradually add scalded milk; mix well.

Chocolate: Increase sugar to one cup; melt two, one-ounce squares unsweetened chocolate in scalded milk.

Coconut: Add one cup moist, shredded coconut to filling. Sprinkle one-half cup of coconut over meringue before browning, or over whipped cream.

Pineapple: Add one-half thoroughly drained, crushed pineapple to cooled filling.

PECAN PIE

½ cup sugar
¼ cup butter
1 cup light corn syrup
¼ tsp. salt
3 eggs
1 cup pecans
1 9-inch unbaked pie shell

Cream sugar and butter; add syrup and salt and beat well. Beat in eggs, one at a time; add pecans. Pour into shell and bake at 350 degrees for one hour and 10 minutes, or til knife inserted comes out clean.

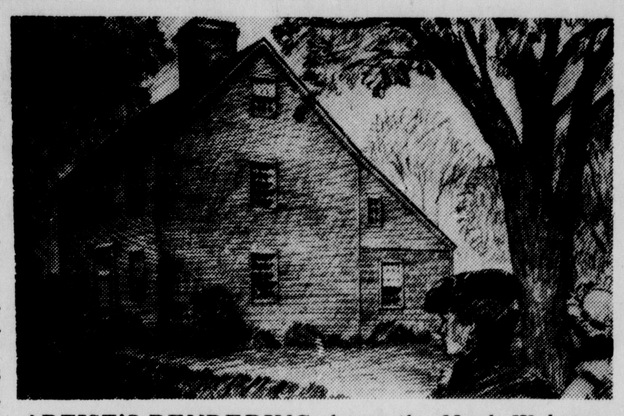
AP Newsfeatures

During his research into Colonial houses, architect Evan Pollitt came across an 18th century Massachusetts salt box house with an unusual feature — a chimney with steps built into it.

As the architect set foot on the second floor of the structure, the first thing he noticed was a chimney coming up from the first floor and going on upwards into the ceiling. The second that caught his attention was a row of rough stones grouted into the chimney and protruding about 18 inches into the room. The house owner said these were the only steps to the attic. They appeared to provide a rather precarious footing, but the owner explained that the stones were not meant for heavy traffic and very, very seldom did anyone ever go into the attic.

The salt box design, by the way, came into being when a New Englander added a lean-to to the rear of his house. He did this by extending the existing roofline downward. The result was a rear roofline much steeper than the front. The design caught on in new construction, especially when someone discovered that, by facing the rear slope the north, there was added protection against the cold winds from that direction.



ARTIST'S RENDERING shows the Noah Webster house in West Hartford, Conn., as it must have looked to residents of the area.

One of the historical salt boxes from which Pollitt has formulated plans is the Noah Webster house in West Hartford, Conn. Webster was born there in 1758. Built about 50 years earlier, it originally consisted of a huge kitchen, a large entranceway and an upstairs area known as a kitchen chamber. Subsequently, before Webster's birth, three rooms were added.

The house basically is the original, except for some restoration measures taken in recent years before it was opened to the public, along with a museum at the rear. Webster was America's first lexicographer and gained fame for his dictionaries and school books but he was, also, a lawyer, judge, legislator and author of books on science, history, disease and the importance of national unity.

In addition to satisfying his desire to design houses built to the exact dimensions of Colonials, architect Pollitt, along the way, became a student of American history.

Women's Sizes Strong on Style

THE WOMAN who grinds her teeth when she sees a fashionable garment advertised "up to size 14" this fall can find blouses and sweaters sizes 36 to 46 and skirts and pants sizes 32 to 40—and made in attractive, up-to-date styles. At left, a neat tonal jacquard pull is worn with slightly flared skirt. At right, the bulk cardigan is slimmed down with long length and vertical ribbing. It's worn over a leafy print shirt and doubleknit pants in a matching solid color. (By Lady Russ)

Pants Not Slacking

THOUGH SKIRTS have been making something of a comeback, a lot of women still find they're comfortable a good deal of the time in pants. You can team crisply tailored pants, as at left, with a butterfly sports blouse and sail through the hottest weather. At right, kick up your heels elegantly in the softest of pants suits complete with matching scarf. (Left, shirt in Phillips nylon and pants in Quintess polyester from Pant-Her. Right, pants suit knit of Quintess polyester from Jon Jon Juniors.)

4-H Dress Revuers Adopt Coordinated Look

CHICAGO — This season's popular mix-and-match look lends itself nicely to tight budgets. A new shirt or vest, especially if it's made at home, can go with last year's skirt or pants for a 1975 look that doesn't cost a fortune.

Separates provide variety in the wardrobe for less cost. But coordinating them is both a challenge and an art. Selecting just the right separates to achieve a fashionable, unified outfit is especially important to young people in the national 4-H dress revue program sponsored by Simplicity Pattern Co. Inc.

"Total" look stressed

4-H dress revues are a learn-by-doing feature of the overall 4-H clothing program conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service. The program, with 347,211 participating boys and girls 9-19, emphasizes selecting, constructing, accessorizing and modeling garments that complement the 4-H member's wardrobe.

Garments modeled in a 4-H dress revue are evaluated on fit, style, suitability of fabric to pattern, and accessories. Just as important as the outfit are the model's grooming, posture and poise.

In 1975, that model is almost as likely to be male as female. Increasingly fashion conscious, boys care about how they look, how their clothes fit, and whether colors and patterns "fit" together.

All-occasion wardrobes

While 4-H'ers select, construct and model clothes for occasions that range from school to active sports to proms, they can work for awards donated by Simplicity and arranged by the National 4-H Service Committee.

This year, one 4-H'er from each of the 50 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico will receive an expense-paid trip to Chicago to participate in the national 4-H dress revue. The revue is a highlight of the 54th National 4-H Congress, to be held Nov. 30 - Dec. 4 at the Conrad Hilton Hotel.

During the Congress six national winners will be honored with college scholarships of $800.

Simplicity also presents medals of honor to 4-H'ers who place in the top 10 per cent in county dress revues.

All award winners are selected by the Extension Service on the basis of their placement in state or county dress revues and their achievements in general 4-H clothing projects.

More information on the national 4-H dress revue program is available from county extension agents.

Coordinating the season's popular mix-and-match look calls for real fashion flair on the part of 347,211 young people in the national 4-H dress revue program. Sponsored by Simplicity Pattern Co. Inc. and conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service, the program encourages 4-H'ers 9-19 to select, construct and model garments that complement their wardrobes.

Bond says Missouri will not pay

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Gov. Christopher S. Bond has insisted Missouri will not make good on an $835,000 shortage of food stamp money in St. Louis.

"We do not intend to pay it," Bond said at a news conference here Tuesday at which he also called for reorganization of the federal food stamp program to make sure only those persons who make less than a poverty-level income can get the stamps.

Officials of the state Social Services Department have insisted that the U.S. Agriculture Department's lack of controls is responsible for the loss at Moneytown, Inc., a St. Louis firm selling food stamps under contract with the state.

The shortage became known two weeks ago in a routine USDA audit.

Bond backed up his administration's demands that the federal government allow the state to check bank deposit confirmations to investigate reports received from vendors such as Moneytown.

Bond also said the USDA ships food stamps to such vendors without notice to state officials.

"Currently, the state has no idea of the quantity of food stamps in the vendor's possession at any given time," he said.

Auditors found that about $1.6 million in cash was missing from Moneytown. The company's owners paid more than $700,000 when notified of the loss.

The owners blamed "incompetent" employes for the problem and promised to repay the remaining shortage from other corporations they own, if necessary.

According to Bond, one way to reform the food stamp program is to transfer its administration from the USDA to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

GM makes financial turnaround

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors' earnings in the third quarter rose nearly 15 times higher than disastrous year-ago levels to $243 million, marking one of the most dramatic financial turnarounds in the auto giant's history.

At the same time, a still-struggling Chrysler Corp., in part a victim like the other U.S. auto makers to GM's renewed strength in the market, disclosed on Tuesday a record third-quarter loss of $79 million. It was the fifth consecutive loss period for the nation's No. 3 car company and pushed its losses since the summer of 1974 to a record $313 million.

Chrysler Chairman John J. Riccardo expressed optimism the firm would turn a modest profit in the fourth quarter.

But he said Chrysler may take "extraordinary actions" concerning operations likely to remain in the red. Such steps might mean another quarterly loss to insure the firm's long-term profitability, he said.

Riccardo did not elaborate, but industry analysts interpreted his statement as a reference to the firm's financially troubled British subsidiary, which lost $32 million in the first six months of 1975.

Ford Motor Co., which releases its third-quarter results on Thursday, is expected to show a decline in profits from last year. American Motors Corp. reports its results next month.

Meanwhile, industry analysts estimated U.S. car production next month would drop from last year's weak levels to the lowest output for a nonstrike November since 1960.

The cautious production plans come despite recent improvements in car sales, indicating company planners are less optimistic about the strength of the new-car market than their spokesmen, who have predicted dramatic sales gains for fall and winter.

Analysts say the firms plan to build about 600,000 cars in November, down 2.5 per cent from 615,000 last year.

GM, the world's largest auto maker, also reported Tuesday it had record sales of $8.3 billion in the July-September period, up 20 per cent from the same 1974 period.

A year ago, GM — hardest hit of the U.S. auto makers by the industrywide sales slump — turned a meager profit of $16.7 million, or 5 cents a share, its worst return for a nonstrike year since 1940.

GM's latest earnings of 84 cents a share, substantially higher than financial analysts had anticipated, were the fourth highest for the period since World War II and approached GM's third-quarter record of $267 million set in 1973.

"GM has exceeded everybody's expectation," said an investment counselor in Detroit. "It has really provided a resounding defeat to the recession."

Analysts credited the firm's rapid recovery to an efficient cost-cutting program, including the layoff of thousands of workers, and greater strength in the small-car market due to an unprecedented shift away from big-car production.

This year, GM has increased its share of the domestic car market to more than 53 per cent, much of its business coming from Chrysler.

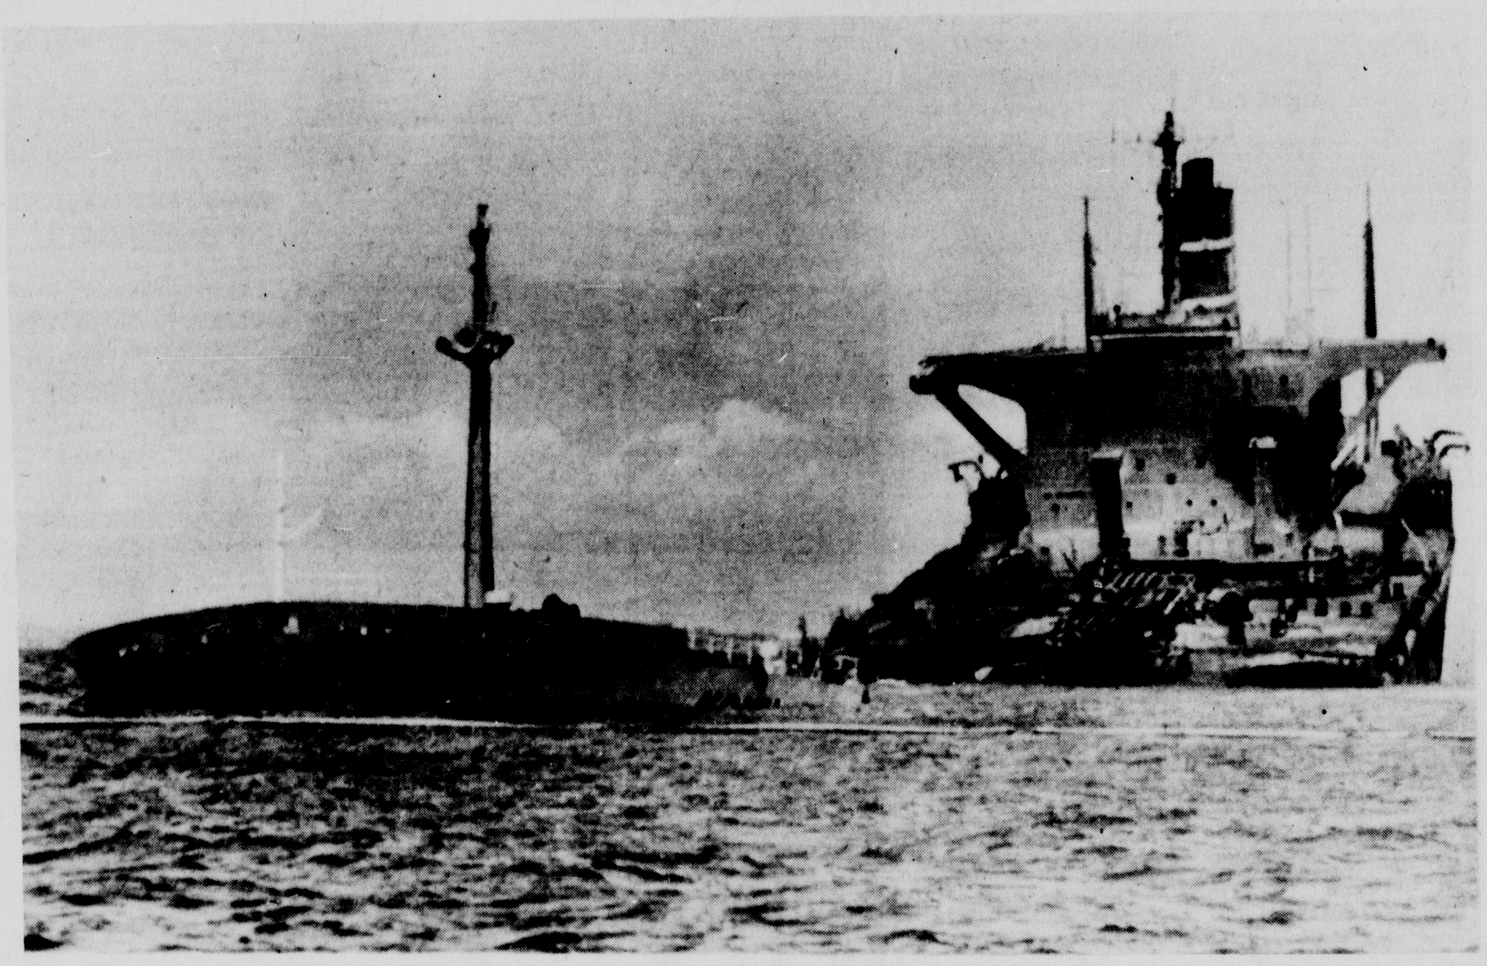
Health Department has been able to stay within its budget only by cutting the number of its personnel.

He also told the board that the state has offered to provide two full-time employes to work in mental health positions in a tri-county area composed of Stoddard, Mississippi and Scott counties, if the counties can provide an office and a full-time secretary.

A meeting will be held Tuesday night in Sikeston for the tri-county health officers, Manning announced.

A car equipped with power steering or brakes, automatic transmission or air conditioning is saddled by an extra load on the engine which could lead to overheating. It is suggested that on long drives the air conditioner be used sparingly.



Sunk by a lightning bolt

The 123,484- ton Greek tanker Kriti Sun sinks in Singapore harbor Tuesday after being struck by lightning. The center part of the ship already is under water. The tanker was hit by lightning after unloading 65,000 tons of crude oil and it touched off explosions that broke the vessel into three parts. There were no fatalities but 12 persons were reported injured. (AP Wirephoto)

Rise Johnson

Students choose top 10 finalists

POINT LOOKOUT -- Rise Johnson of Sikeston has been honored by the student body of The School of the Ozarks as one of the 10 semifinalists in this year's homecoming pageant.

Miss Johnson was chosen by secret ballot to join nine other young women who will vie for the crown at the coronation ceremony Friday at 7:30 p.m. in Jones Auditorium.

Missouri employment shows raise

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Preliminary figures compiled by the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations show total employment in Missouri rose by 24,500 persons in September, and dropped the unemployment rate to 6.4 per cent from August's 7 per cent.

Although today's labor statistics show a turnaround in employment, the rate is far from the 4.1 per cent jobless rate of September, 1974.

September is a month wich normally experiences a seasonal increase in employment, due partially to the reopening of schools.

Average weekly earnings for Missouri's manufacturing production and related workers increased $6.22 from $186.33 in August to $192.55 in September.

Missouri harvests ahead of this time last year

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri corn, soybean, grain sorghum and cotton harvests are well ahead of harvesting at this time last year, the state Crop and Livestock Reporting Service reports.

Corn was 78 per cent cut last week, soybeans 70 per cent harvested, grain sorghum 81 per cent complete and cotton 72 per cent.

Winter wheat seeding was reported 74 per cent complete, and plowing or spring planted crops 31 per cent complete.

Church advises waiting to put out garbage cans

City manager Charles Church said today that residents who have garbage pickup Saturday should wait until Saturday morning to put out their garbage cans to prevent the contents from being scattered about on Halloween.

Dwelling broken into

DEXTER — The home of R. L. Thompson, 120 N. First St., was broken into Tuesday afternoon. A television set, tape recorder, guitar and $3 in pennies were taken.

The home was entered by breaking out a glass in the back door.

Thieves get case beer

Thieves took a case of beer valued at $6.40 from Bess Supply Co., Highway 61 South, sometime late Tuesday night or early this morning, according to police.

Thieves got into the building by breaking out a window.

budget will not permit us to fund this project. We have received many more good proposals than we will be able to fund this year."

Smith said top priority is being assigned to projects which will serve publicly-owned land.

Smith added that Miner is eligible, but does not have the prority for further consideration at this time.

Wheeler said the board is sending more information to the EDA in hopes of changing its mind.

If the EDA still says no, he said, Miner will reapply next year for funds.

Miner is also exploring the possibility of obtaining the funds from other agencies, he said.

Burial will be in Portageville Cemetery with Ponder Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

GM makes financial turnaround

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors' earnings in the third quarter rose nearly 15 times higher than disastrous year-ago levels to $243 million, marking one of the most dramatic financial turnarounds in the auto giant's history.

At the same time, a still-struggling Chrysler Corp., in part a victim like the other U.S. auto makers to GM's renewed strength in the market, disclosed on Tuesday a record third-quarter loss of $79 million. It was the fifth consecutive loss period for the nation's No. 3 car company and pushed its losses since the summer of 1974 to a record $313 million.

Chrysler Chairman John J. Riccardo expressed optimism the firm would turn a modest profit in the fourth quarter.

But he said Chrysler may take "extraordinary actions" concerning operations likely to remain in the red. Such steps might mean another quarterly loss to insure the firm's long-term profitability, he said.

Riccardo did not elaborate, but industry analysts interpreted his statement as a reference to the firm's financially troubled British subsidiary, which lost $32 million in the first six months of 1975.

Ford Motor Co., which releases its third-quarter results on Thursday, is expected to show a decline in profits from last year. American Motors Corp. reports its results next month.

Meanwhile, industry analysts estimated U.S. car production next month would drop from last year's weak levels to the lowest output for a nonstrike November since 1960.

The cautious production plans come despite recent improvements in car sales, indicating company planners are less optimistic about the strength of the new-car market than their spokesmen, who have predicted dramatic sales gains for fall and winter.

Analysts say the firms plan to build about 600,000 cars in November, down 2.5 per cent from 615,000 last year.

GM, the world's largest auto maker, also reported Tuesday it had record sales of $8.3 billion in the July-September period, up 20 per cent from the same 1974 period.

A year ago, GM — hardest hit of the U.S. auto makers by the industrywide sales slump — turned a meager profit of $16.7 million, or 5 cents a share, its worst return for a nonstrike year since 1940.

GM's latest earnings of 84 cents a share, substantially higher than financial analysts had anticipated, were the fourth highest for the period since World War II and approached GM's third-quarter record of $267 million set in 1973.

"GM has exceeded everybody's expectation," said an investment counselor in Detroit. "It has really provided a resounding defeat to the recession."

Analysts credited the firm's rapid recovery to an efficient cost-cutting program, including the layoff of thousands of workers, and greater strength in the small-car market due to an unprecedented shift away from big-car production.

This year, GM has increased its share of the domestic car market to more than 53 per cent, much of its business coming from Chrysler.

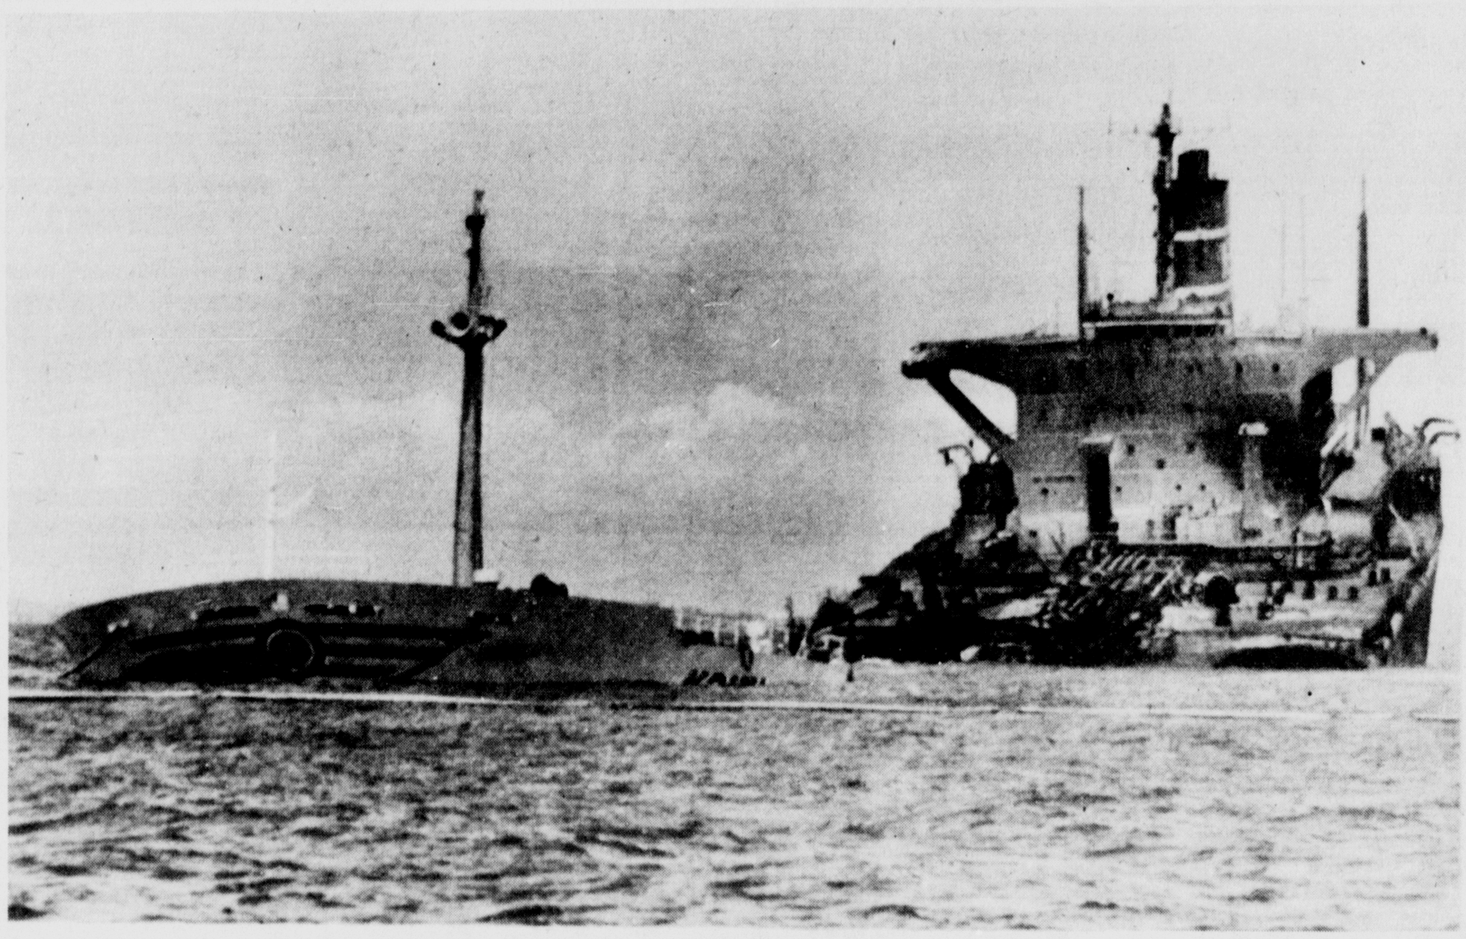
Health Department has been able to stay within its budget only by cutting the number of its personnel.

He also told the board that the state has offered to provide two full-time employes to work in mental health positions in a tri-county area composed of Stoddard, Mississippi and Scott counties, if the counties can provide an office and a full-time secretary.

A meeting will be held Tuesday night in Sikeston for the tri-county health officers, Manning announced.

A car equipped with power steering or brakes, automatic transmission or air conditioning is saddled by an extra load on the engine which could lead to overheating. It is suggested that on long drives the air conditioner be used sparingly.



Sunk by a lightning bolt

The 123,484- ton Greek tanker Kriti Sun sinks in Singapore harbor Tuesday after being struck by lightning. The center part of the ship already is under water. The tanker was hit by lightning after unloading 65,000 tons of crude oil and it touched off explosions that broke the vessel into three parts. There were no fatalities but 12 persons were reported injured. (AP Wirephoto)

Missouri harvests ahead of this time last year

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri corn, soybean, grain sorghum and cotton harvests are well ahead of harvesting at this time last year, the state Crop and Livestock Reporting Service reports.

Corn was 78 per cent cut last week, soybeans 70 per cent harvested, grain sorghum 81 per cent complete and cotton 72 per cent.

Winter wheat seeding was reported 74 per cent complete, and plowing or spring planted crops 31 per cent complete.

Bond says Missouri will not pay

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Gov. Christopher S. Bond has insisted Missouri will not make good on an $835,000 shortage of food stamp money in St. Louis.

"We do not intend to pay it," Bond said at a news conference here Tuesday at which he also called for reorganization of the federal food stamp program to make sure only those persons who make less than a poverty-level income can get the stamps.

Officials of the state Social Services Department have insisted that the U.S. Agriculture Department's lack of controls is responsible for the loss at Moneytown, Inc., a St. Louis firm selling food stamps under contract with the state.

The shortage became known two weeks ago in a routine USDA audit.

Bond backed up his administration's demands that the federal government allow the state to check bank deposit confirmations to investigate reports received from vendors such as Moneytown.

Bond also said the USDA ships food stamps to such vendors without notice to state officials.

"Currently, the state has no idea of the quantity of food stamps in the vendor's possession at any given time," he said.

Auditors found that about $1.6 million in cash was missing from Moneytown. The company's owners paid more than $700,000 when notified of the loss.

The owners blamed "incompetent" employes for the problem and promised to repay the remaining shortage from other corporations they own, if necessary.

According to Bond, one way to reform the food stamp program is to transfer its administration from the USDA to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Students choose top 10 finalists

POINT LOOKOUT -- Rise Johnson of Sikeston has been honored by the student body of The School of the Ozarks as one of the 10 semifinalists in this year's homecoming pageant.

Miss Johnson was chosen by secret ballot to join nine other young women who will vie for the crown at the coronation ceremony Friday at 7:30 p.m. in Jones Auditorium.

Missouri employment shows raise

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Preliminary figures compiled by the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations show total employment in Missouri rose by 24,500 persons in September, and dropped the unemployment rate to 6.4 per cent from August's 7 per cent.

Although today's labor statistics show a turnaround in employment, the rate is far from the 4.1 per cent jobless rate of September, 1974.

September is a month wich normally experiences a seasonal increase in employment, due partially to the reopening of schools.

Average weekly earnings for Missouri's manufacturing production and related workers increased $6.22 from $186.33 in August to $192.55 in September.

Eagles need win to clinch South

The East Prairie Eagles will be playing for their pride this Thursday night when they take on Malden, but there are a few added incentives for the Eagles this week as well.

"We looked like Missouri against Wisconsin last year," said coach Ed Nichols about his team's humiliating 41-0 loss at Charleston Friday night, recalling that Mizzou had entered that game as favorites but wound up being blown off the field by the Badgers, 59-20.

Obviously, the Eagles would like to bounce back and do a job on Malden, if for no other reason, to prove that they are indeed a very good football team and that the Charleston game was "one of those nights".

But perhaps more importantly, the Eagles would like to beat Malden to clinch the Southern Division conference flag. East Prairie already has been assured of at least a tie for the honor, but a victory tomorrow evening would guarantee them of sole possession of the title for the first time since 1951, when the circuit was known as the "Little Seven".

A win Thursday night would also make the 1975 Eagles the winningest squad in the history of their school. The 1951 team won seven of eight outings, while this year's East Prairie team has already won seven.

And there is still one more incentive for the Eagles to whip Malden. Although their post-season hopes were dealt a serious blow by their loss to Charleston, the Eagles still have a chance of getting into the Class AA State Playoffs. In addition to the Malden battle, East Prairie also has an encounter left with Gosnell, Arkansas. An upset to either team would spoil those chances, but a pair of victories would make things look pretty good for East Prairie.

Ohio State star running back Archie Griffin gets a kiss from a Buckeye fan outside the dressing room in Lafayette Saturday. Griffin led the top ranked Ohio State team to a 35-6 win over Purdue and set a new all-time rushing record of 4,730 yards in the game. (AP Wirephoto)

Off the mark

Bulldogs bow out of district net tourney

ESSEX — The Sikeston Bulldog volleyball team ended their season against the talented Bloomfield Wildcats in the Site 12 District tournament here Tuesday night with a double loss 15-4 and 15-9.

For Sikeston it was just too much Stephnie Miller of Bloomfield, who is probably the best spiker in the area.

Bloomfield had little trouble in the first game of the night as Sikeston had trouble stopping Miss Miller. The second game started a little more slowly as Sikeston was able to shut off the Bloomfield spiking more effectively and stayed in the game until Bloomfield got rolling and took charge.

Sikeston ended the season with a 4-9 overall record after a 4-6 record last year. This marked only the second season for Sikeston in the sport of volleyball.

"There has been a definite improvement over last year," said a pleased coach Jane Merrick. "We use more pattern play than last year. We just haven't been able to develop that number one spiker like the Bloomfield girl," she said. "I'm going to try to set up a workshop for seventh and eighth grade girls next year."

Thus far in the tournament the top three seeded teams are still alive as Richland is first seeded followed by Bloomfield second and Advance third.

Advance had no trouble with East Prairie in the first game running away with a 15-2 score. The Hornets used their reserves to start the second game and quickly fell behind but after three regulars were inserted into the lineup the Hornets pulled away to a 15-8 victory.

Number one seeded Richland beat Illmo-Scott City 15-2 in the first game but had to struggle to win 15-7 in the second game.

Puxico had little trouble with Charleston winning 15-4 and 15-5 to stay alive.

Wednesday night's action will pit Richland against Puxico at 6:30 and Advance and Bloomfield battling at 8:30 in the semi-finals.

Cards hope Kessinger can still play short

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals have reached out again for a shortstop, and Don Kessinger says he's their man.

"I can do more to help a club now than at any time previously," remarked the 33-year-old Kessinger following his acquisition Tuesday from the Chicago Cubs in exchange for Mike Garman and a player to be named.

"I've taken care of myself and now's the time to reap the benefits," he added. "I know I can do anything on the field that I ever did."

A .256 lifetime hitter, Kessinger batted only .243 during the 1975 season, his 11th with the Cubs.

"In the last 2½ months I felt better at the plate than I ever did," he said, however. "I picked up at the end, but when you go to bat over 600 times in a season you hve a hard time picking up many points on your average in September."

The Cards' search for a shortstop has been a priority project since Dal Maxvill was traded at the end of the 1972 season.

Ray Busse was tried at the position in 1973 but quickly gave way to Mike Tyson, a fireball who has since withstood numerous challengers.

Tyson, however, is considered a better second baseman than he is a shortstop, meaning the Cards may have intentions of trading Ted Sizemore to provide him a spot.

Cards general manager Bing Devine, who last year dealt away three pitchers for American League veteran Ed Brinkman to play shortstop, later traded Brinkman to the Texas Rangers for Willie Davis.

"Kessinger's played in the National League," Devine said in defense of his latest move. "We've seen him play and our people have been able to judge him on the basis of what they saw instead of taking the word of scouts."

The 6-foot-1 Kessinger, a former basketball-baseball star at Mississippi, admitted a lifelong affinity for the Cards stemming frm his boyhood in Forrest City, Ark.

"That's still Cardinal country," he noted. "I was a great Cardinal rooter as a kid. Stan Musial was my favorite."

Garman, a 26-year-old right-handed relief pitcher who slipped to a 3-8 record in 1975, admitted reservations toward pitching in Chicago's compact Wrigley Field and reluctance on the part of his 8-year-old son to leave St. Louis.

"He heard that they were building the world's largest roller coaster," Garman said of a project underway at an amusement park. "and now he'll be in Chicago."

"I wish nothing but the best for all concerned," said Kessinger, Chicago's starting shortstop since 1965, from his home in Memphis, Tenn. "I have nothing but respect for the Cubs."

Racing tires drivers, says Richard Petty

RANDLEMAN, N.C. — Tension, heat and the force of gravity generated inside NASCAR racing machines during super speedway races eat away at drivers, pushing them to the point of exhaustion, says NASCAR star Richard Petty.

"Drivers fight a constant battle with physical and mental exhaustion," added the five-time Winston Cup Grand National Series champion and the top winner in NASCAR history. "In a super speedway race, we drive for several hours and hundreds of miles at speeds that can reach over 200 miles an hour, and we are always fighting the car, the track and each other."

In addition to the mental pressures of handling more than a ton of steel at high speeds, Petty said the physical strain can be tremendous.

"Heat can drain a driver. It's not uncommon for the temperature inside a car to reach 130 degrees on a warm day, and there's just no way a driver can escape, since air conditioning would add too much weight to the car," he said. "It is not unusual for me to lose seven or eight pounds through perspiration during a race."

To make the heat bearable, Petty uses a device developed by NASA for astronauts. Called the "Cool Head," the equipment circulates chilled water around his head from a tank mounted on the floor of his STP Dodge.

"Before we got this equipment we used ice packs strapped to my chest," he said, "but they didn't last long enough."

Petty also has foam-padded shoes to protect his feet from the engine heat, and he takes salt tablets and aspirin to keep his body going.

On the high-banked left turns of the super speedways, the G-forces generated when the cars take the turns at high speeds punish the drivers by forcing their heads to the right. To ease the strain on his neck, Petty uses a strap looped around his left shoulder and connected to his helmet to hold his head stable in the turns.

"Until we got the strap, I would wake up some mornings after a race unable to straighten my head because my neck muscles were so sore," he said.

To battle the G-forces, the Randleman driver also uses a specially padded seat which holds his body to the left.

Unlike some drivers, Petty uses no elaborate conditioning program to prepare for races.

"I sleep," he says.

'I'll normally sleep 10 to 12 hours a day. But the night before a race, I'll sleep as long as possible. In face, the crew has had to wake me right before the race a few times."

Pett's mental approach to a race also shows his relaxed outlook.

"Some drivers feel they have to psych themselves up for a race, but I don't believe in it," he said. "If you get all psyched up and something bothers you or you get off your plan for the race, you get impatient and make mistakes.

"Sure you've got to keep your mind on the race. If a driver doesn't concentrate he's asking for trouble. But you've got to be flexible and ready to adjust to any situation."

Petty said he can only remember one occasion when he let his mind wander during a race.

"I had an eight-lap lead in a race a couple of years and I guess I just got too comfortable," he said. "As a result, I smacked the wall and lost the race."

Jaycee football banquet set for November 8

The Sikeston Jaycee Little League Football program will officially conclude its second season of play when the Jaycees sponsor a banquet for the players, coaches and parents Saturday, November 8. The event will be held at the Sikeston Country Club and will begin at 6:30.

Individual trophies will be presented to members of the Bank of Sikeston team, which went undefeated and claimed the league championship. Outgoing players will receive the Jaycee Little League Football patch, while other boys who participated this season will receive a certificate from the Jaycees.

Movies of the Bank of Sikeston - Jaycees championship game two weeks ago will be shown, along with a film of the National Lock-Daily Standard contest the same day. In addition, the St. Louis Football Cardinals have donated the film, "Big Play, Big Season" to show at the banquet. The film, which is a review of the Big Red's 1974-75 season, is narrated by Cardinal announcer Bob Starr.

Commissioner Mike Taylor said that proceeds from donations and concessions sold at the games will go toward the banquet. Parents attending the banquet will be asked to pay $2.50 to cover the cost of their meal, which will be catered by the El Capri Restaurant.

Bluff and Dexter win at Risco

RISCO— Poplar Bluff and New Madrid staged the most exciting game in the Site 11 Girls District volleyball tournament here Tuesday night as the Mules had to go three game before coming away with a best two of three. Poplar Bluff won the first game 15-2 but after a nip and tuck affair in the second contest New Madrid won 16-14. The Mules regrouped in the third game and won 15-8.

Dexter had not trouble beating the Gideon Bulldogs 15-5 in the first game and 15-1 in the second.

Action resumes Thursday night where three games are on tap as Lilbourn plays Risco at 6:30. Holcomb plays Bernie at 7:30 and Portageville plays New Madrid at 8:30.

Off the mark

Bulldogs bow out of district net tourney

ESSEX — The Sikeston Bulldog volleyball team ended their season against the talented Bloomfield Wildcats in the Site 12 District tournament here Tuesday night with a double loss 15-4 and 15-9.

For Sikeston it was just too much Stephnie Miller of Bloomfield, who is probably the best spiker in the area.

Bloomfield had little trouble in the first game of the night as Sikeston had trouble stopping Miss Miller. The second game started a little more slowly as Sikeston was able to shut off the Bloomfield spiking more effectively and stayed in the game until Bloomfield got rolling and took charge.

Sikeston ended the season with a 4-9 overall record after a 4-6 record last year. This marked only the second season for Sikeston in the sport of volleyball.

"There has been a definite improvement over last year," said a pleased coach Jane Merrick. "We use more pattern play than last year. We just haven't been able to develop that number one spiker like the Bloomfield girl," she said. "I'm going to try to set up a workshop for seventh and eighth grade girls next year."

Thus far in the tournament the top three seeded teams are still alive as Richland is first seeded followed by Bloomfield second and Advance third.

Advance had no trouble with East Prairie in the first game running away with a 15-2 score. The Hornets used their reserves to start the second game and quickly fell behind but after three regulars were inserted into the lineup the Hornets pulled away to a 15-8 victory.

Number one seeded Richland beat Illmo-Scott City 15-2 in the first game but had to struggle to win 15-7 in the second game.

Puxico had little trouble with Charleston winning 15-4 and 15-5 to stay alive.

Wednesday night's action will pit Richland against Puxico at 6:30 and Advance and Bloomfield battling at 8:30 in the semi-finals.

Cards hope Kessinger can still play short

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals have reached out again for a shortstop, and Don Kessinger says he's their man.

"I can do more to help a club now than at any time previously," remarked the 33-year-old Kessinger following his acquisition Tuesday from the Chicago Cubs in exchange for Mike Garman and a player to be named.

"I've taken care of myself and now's the time to reap the benefits," he added. "I know I can do anything on the field that I ever did."

A .256 lifetime hitter, Kessinger batted only .243 during the 1975 season, his 11th with the Cubs.

"In the last 2½ months I felt better at the plate than I ever did," he said, however. "I picked up at the end, but when you go to bat over 600 times in a season you hve a hard time picking up many points on your average in September."

The Cards' search for a shortstop has been a priority project since Dal Maxvill was traded at the end of the 1972 season.

Ray Busse was tried at the position in 1973 but quickly gave way to Mike Tyson, a fireball who has since withstood numerous challengers.

Tyson, however, is considered a better second baseman than he is a shortstop, meaning the Cards may have intentions of trading Ted Sizemore to provide him a spot.

Cards general manager Bing Devine, who last year dealt away three pitchers for American League veteran Ed Brinkman to play shortstop, later traded Brinkman to the Texas Rangers for Willie Davis.

"Kessinger's played in the National League," Devine said in defense of his latest move. "We've seen him play and our people have been able to judge him on the basis of what they saw instead of taking the word of scouts."

The 6-foot-1 Kessinger, a former basketball-baseball star at Mississippi, admitted a lifelong affinity for the Cards stemming frm his boyhood in Forrest City, Ark.

"That's still Cardinal country," he noted. "I was a great Cardinal rooter as a kid. Stan Musial was my favorite."

Garman, a 26-year-old right-handed relief pitcher who slipped to a 3-8 record in 1975, admitted reservations toward pitching in Chicago's compact Wrigley Field and reluctance on the part of his 8-year-old son to leave St. Louis.

"He heard that they were building the world's largest roller coaster," Garman said of a project underway at an amusement park. "and now he'll be in Chicago."

"I wish nothing but the best for all concerned," said Kessinger, Chicago's starting shortstop since 1965, from his home in Memphis, Tenn. "I have nothing but respect for the Cubs."

Racing tires drivers, says Richard Petty

RANDLEMAN, N.C. — Tension, heat and the force of gravity generated inside NASCAR racing machines during super speedway races eat away at drivers, pushing them to the point of exhaustion, says NASCAR star Richard Petty.

"Drivers fight a constant battle with physical and mental exhaustion," added the five-time Winston Cup Grand National Series champion and the top winner in NASCAR history. "In a super speedway race, we drive for several hours and hundreds of miles at speeds that can reach over 200 miles an hour, and we are always fighting the car, the track and each other."

In addition to the mental pressures of handling more than a ton of steel at high speeds, Petty said the physical strain can be tremendous.

"Heat can drain a driver. It's not uncommon for the temperature inside a car to reach 130 degrees on a warm day, and there's just no way a driver can escape, since air conditioning would add too much weight to the car," he said. "It is not unusual for me to lose seven or eight pounds through perspiration during a race."

To make the heat bearable, Petty uses a device developed by NASA for astronauts. Called the "Cool Head," the equipment circulates chilled water around his head from a tank mounted on the floor of his STP Dodge.

"Before we got this equipment we used ice packs strapped to my chest," he said, "but they didn't last long enough."

Petty also has foam-padded shoes to protect his feet from the engine heat, and he takes salt tablets and aspirin to keep his body going.

On the high-banked left turns of the super speedways, the G-forces generated when the cars take the turns at high speeds punish the drivers by forcing their heads to the right. To ease the strain on his neck, Petty uses a strap looped around his left shoulder and connected to his helmet to hold his head stable in the turns.

"Until we got the strap, I would wake up some mornings after a race unable to straighten my head because my neck muscles were so sore," he said.

To battle the G-forces, the Randleman driver also uses a specially padded seat which holds his body to the left.

Unlike some drivers, Petty uses no elaborate conditioning program to prepare for races.

"I sleep," he says.

'I'll normally sleep 10 to 12 hours a day. But the night before a race, I'll sleep as long as possible. In face, the crew has had to wake me right before the race a few times."

Pett's mental approach to a race also shows his relaxed outlook.

"Some drivers feel they have to psych themselves up for a race, but I don't believe in it," he said. "If you get all psyched up and something bothers you or you get off your plan for the race, you get impatient and make mistakes.

"Sure you've got to keep your mind on the race. If a driver doesn't concentrate he's asking for trouble. But you've got to be flexible and ready to adjust to any situation."

Petty said he can only remember one occasion when he let his mind wander during a race.

"I had an eight-lap lead in a race a couple of years and I guess I just got too comfortable," he said. "As a result, I smacked the wall and lost the race."

Cigarettes and booze give lift to schools

JEFFERSON CITY — Smoking may be hazardous to your health, but it's great — financially — for your school district.

And so are drinking and speeding violations for that matter.

They are all sources of income for the Missouri Department of Elementary and Secondary Education.

Last year Missourians lit up more than $57 million in cigarette tax collection fees — 14.5 per cent of the state's total funding for education.

Cigarette tax collection fees are the only taxes earmarked solely for the State School Monies Fund. Each cigarette is taxed .0045 cents, or about 10 cents per 55-cent pack.

And this year the Missouri Division of Accounting expects more than $60 million. In the first three months of the current fiscal year (July, August and September 1975), $15.1 million in cigarette taxes were collected.

And cigarette taxes are just one of the many taxes the state capitalizes on from the faults and vices of its citizens.

Speeding tickets and other violations last year helped Missouri students by more than $4.2 million.

Taxes from alcoholic beverages last year totaled $22 million in general revenues, part of which was appropriated to education.

A Free Textbook Monies tax, a tax on all insurance companies whose home offices are based outside the state, generated $16.3 million last year, or about 3.7 per cent of Missouri's school funding.

Student body activities generated $20 million last year from the sale of sports tickets, yearbooks, newspapers, etc.

But, Student Body Activities expenditures were $21 million last year.

One recently repealed tax was the Trailer Camp School Tax, a 3 per cent tax on the first six months of rental receipts on a mobile home or trailer park site.

In past years this tax was not enforced and an average of $6,000 per year was collected from "whatever people decided to send it in," a Missouri Department of Revenue official said.

But in January 1974, Wes Wilbur became the new sales tax bureau manager and enforced the law, collecting $108,360 this past year in the process.

Wilbur had to move people from other areas to collect this tax and it was repealed at the end of last month.

Inheritance taxes contributed $18 million to general revenue and vital statistics, an income from copies of birth and death certificates, generated $344,189.

'Waterbell' accuser seems miscast as giant killer now

BLANCO, Tex. (AP) — Smilin' Jim Ashley, an ambitious Bell Telephone Co. executive who became its principal accuser, now calls this sunburnt Texas Hill Country community home. He operates his own business, selling parcels of land to weekend ranchers.

A year ago , his friend, T.O. Gravitt, gassed himself to death in Dallas. Ashley and the family of Gravitt, Southwestern Bell's top man in Texas, filed suit and the allegations shook the nation's largest phone company.

Today, Texas law provides for a state utility commission. A year ago, Bell was gliding along without regulation at the state level.

A year ago, Ashley, 46, had never worked for anyone but Bell.

Today, he seems miscast as David against the corporate Goliath.

Once proud he had survived the boardroom jungle, the motto—"Have bag, will travel"—didn't faze him. At Bell's request, he had moved 14 times in 19 years on a business odyssey for the bigger paycheck.

At San Antonio, his final stop, Ashley was Bell's chief rate negotiator for two thirds of Texas. He was responsible for collecting $30 million a month. Fourteen hundred employes called him "boss," and he made a boss' salary—$55,000 a year. His name, he says, was on the list for promotion to vice-president.

In the fall of 1974, however, a company investigation surfaced, and Ashley was suspended for allegedly taking kickbacks from suppliers and other sins. Eight days later, on Oct. 17, his former boss Gravitt an $80,000-a-year Bell vice president, was found dead.

"Watergate is a gnat compared to the Bell system," said Gravitt, 51, in a suicide note.

Ashley and the Gravitts' suit was filed Nov. 25, alleging libel and that the Bell investigation had driven Gravitt to his death. Ashley was fired. The suit was transferred from state to federal court, where it sets today without a trial date.

The case, however, was widely publicized.

"I thought the revelations would be devastating to Bell," Ashley recalled in an interview this week at his new business, Jim Ashley Real Estate, "but I was shocked at the degree of impact. I never intended to embark on a great crusade."

Bell's problems became known to some as "Waterbell".

Federal investigators have looked into allegations of corporate money having been funneled into political campaigns in the Southwest, but Bell does not face any charges, and denies it operates a slush fund. A state commission in Missouri, another state in which Southwestern Bell operates, heard testimony. Similar allegations surfaced in North Carolina about Southern Bell, another Bell system company.

The staff of the Texas Senate subcommittee on consumer affairs disclosed that:

—Bell executives spent "outrageously high" sums of money to "wine and dine" friends and influence city council votes on proposals for higher phone rates.

—Bell had "maniuplated" figures to get all it could out of Texas ratepayers.

—Bell executives regularly donated money to political candidates, a pattern Ashley contends was a "condition of employment."

Houston police chief Carrol Lynn testified that more than 200 Bell employes had helped his department in 1,000 illegal wiretapping cases since 1968, but Bell vice-president Charles Marshall denied it.

Later, Lynn said a tap had been found on his private office line, and even Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said he had "always kind of assumed" his phone was tapped although none had been found.

No indictments have been returned from federal and state grand jury probes.

The shadow on Bell's image was probably responsible for swaying enough votes in the legislature to create Texas' firt state utilities commission, which will regulate rates and service on all intrastate calls beginning next September.

Public opinion against Bell gets part of the credit, too, for Atty. Gen. John Hill's unprecedented opposition to Bell's proposed $45 million a year increase in intrastate long-distance rates. Hill won a judgment that cost Bell $50 million over two years.

But what became of Ashley, who perhaps started it all?

He cashed in his Bell savings and, six months later, moved to Blanco, population 1,022, a town that Ashley refers to as "destiny's godchild" because of its prime location, near both Austin and San Antonio.

"I'm languishing in a world of ignorance. I don't know if these are good times or bad times in real estate," said Ashley. "I've only been here since March."

He and his wife, Bonnie, who is his secretary, live in a rock house on 28 acres, four miles east of Blanco. Their children Eric, 14, and Elise, 12, live with them, and two sons are at the University of Texas.

"It's quite an adjustment," said Ashley, whose dusty boots reflect part of that adjustment. "My kids had always lived in suburbia. They never knew anything else existed, but they like it."

"Coming to Blanco is like going back in time," says Bonnie.

Ashley thought about why he had filed the suit, and said, "To clear my name—I was branded guilty—and to make someone accountable for Gravitt's death."

Frankly Speaking

BY THOMAS F. EAGLETON
U.S. SENATOR
Room 6235 NSOB
Washington, D.C. 20510

A WASHINGTON SAMPLER

Today I would like to use this column to bring you up to date on several items which I think will be of interest to you.

Flood Insurance -- The federal flood insurance program will be considered at hearings which have been set for November 12 and 13 by the Senate Banking, Housing and Urban Development Committee. They had been scheduled tentatively for late October. My bill, S.810, which would eliminate some of the mandatory and punitive aspects of the program, will be a main focus of the testimony. Banking Committee Chairman William Proxmire has said that the hearing will be followed by floor action on a flood insurance bill.

Oil Tariffs -- The U.S. Court of Appeals recently held that the Presidentially ordered tariff on oil imports was illegal. The government is now appealing the decision to the Supreme Court. In the meantime, I believe steps should be taken to provide a refund to consumers in the event the Supreme Court upholds the lower court decision. Accordingly, I have cosponsored a bill in the Senate requiring that monies collected under the tariff program be held apart from other revenues in the Treasury until the matter is resolved.

* * *

Oil For Grain -- The Soviet Union today is the world's largest producer of crude oil. The United States is second and Saudi Arabia is third. It makes sense to me for the United States to demand at least partial payment in oil for the grain that the Soviets need from us. I've cosponsored a Senate resolution to that effect and I am pleased to note that negotiations to bring about such an oil-for-grain barter seem headed for success.

* * *

It's A Big Country -- I attended a recent meeting of an Appropriations Subcommittee where an Eastern Senator offered an amendment to provide funds for the eradication of the multiflora rose from his state, where it is considered a noxious weed. The measure was promptly adopted, whereupon a Southwestern Senator observed that it was a strange proceeding indeed, since the same bill provided funds to plant the multiflora rose in his state, where it is considered an excellent ground cover. Compromise was the word of the day. Both items stayed in the bill.

* * *

Office Efficiency -- Lastly, I am delighted to report that an independent survey of five randomly selected offices in the Senate showed that my office answered the greatest percentage of mail, and answered it the fastest. I place a great emphasis on constituent service, and will work to see that the quality and speed continues.

Oil For Grain -- The Soviet Union today is the world's largest producer of crude oil. The United States is second and Saudi Arabia is third. It makes sense to me for the United States to demand at least partial payment in oil for the grain that the Soviets need from us. I've cosponsored a Senate resolution to that effect and I am pleased to note that negotiations to bring about such an oil-for-grain barter seem headed for success.

* * *

It's A Big Country -- I attended a recent meeting of an Appropriations Subcommittee where an Eastern Senator offered an amendment to provide funds for the eradication of the multiflora rose from his state, where it is considered a noxious weed. The measure was promptly adopted, whereupon a Southwestern Senator observed that it was a strange proceeding indeed, since the same bill provided funds to plant the multiflora rose in his state, where it is considered an excellent ground cover. Compromise was the word of the day. Both items stayed in the bill.

* * *

Office Efficiency -- Lastly, I am delighted to report that an independent survey of five randomly selected offices in the Senate showed that my office answered the greatest percentage of mail, and answered it the fastest. I place a great emphasis on constituent service, and will work to see that the quality and speed continues.

Daily thoughts

WEDNESDAY

"What is my strength, that I should wait? And what is my end, that I should be patient?" — Job 6:11.

"In the long run, we shape our lives, and we shape ourselves. The process never ends until we die. And the choices we make are ultimately our own responsibilities." — Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt.

THURSDAY

I did not listen to the voice of my teachers or incline my ear to my instructors. — Proverbs 5:13.

"You cannot teach a man anything; you can only help him to find it for himself." — Galileo Galilei, Italian astronomer.

FRIDAY

"I am the man who has seen affliction under the rod of his wrath; he has driven and brought me into darkness without any light; surely against me he turns his hand again and again the whole day long." — Lamentations 3:1, 2, 3.

"Man is never helped in his suffering by what he thinks for himself, but only by revelation of a wisdom greater than his own. It is this which lifts him out of his distress." — Carl Jung, German psychologist.

SATURDAY

Let the thief no longer steal, but rather let him labor, doing honest work with his hands, so that he may be able to give to those in need. — Ephesians 4:28.

"I believe in the dignity of labor, whether with head or hand; that the world owes every man an opportunity to make a living" — John D. Rockefeller Jr., American financier.

SUNDAY

So Barnabas went to Tarsus to look for Saul; and when he had found him, he brought him to Antioch. For a whole year they met with the church, and taught a large company of people; and in Antioch the disciples were for the first time called Christians. — Acts 11:25,26.

"I have now disposed of all my property to my family. There is one thing more I wish I could give them, and that is the Christian religion. If they had that, and I had not given them one shilling, they would have been rich, and if they had not that, and I had given them all the world, they would be poor." — Patrick Henry, American orator.

MONDAY

Another said, "I will follow you, Lord; but let me first say farewell to those at my home." Jesus said to him, "No one who puts his hand to the plow and looks back is fit for the kingdom of God." — Luke 9:61,62.

"We ought not to look back unless it is to derive useful lessons from past errors, and for the purpose of profiting by dear-bought experience." — George Washington, First U.S. President.

TUESDAY

I myself am satisfied about you, my brethren, that you yourselves are full of goodness, filled with all knowledge, and able to instruct one another. — Romans 15:14.

"The good that is in you is the good that you do for others." — Roger Babson, American statistician.

TO THE EAST PRAIRIE EAGLES FOOTBALL TEAM

Eagles, we are proud of you! Your record stands for itself. What other team can boast of seven consecutive victories and only one loss?

We want to apologize to you for the irresponsible adults that went to you individually and placed unnecessary strain upon you by telling you they had placed bets on The East Prairie-Charleston football game. We want to apologize for the fair weather fans that left during the first game you have lost this year.

We know how hard you have worked this year. We know the long hours of practice you have put in. There are not enough words in the English language to tell you how proud and appreciative we are of each one of you.

You are the greatest! Why else would The Daily Standard and The Enterprise newspapers play down your victories seven consecutive weeks and play up your one loss last week.

Win or lose, you have given your best and you will be supported and loved by the big majority of East Prairie boosters. Eagles, your record outshines them all.

What's the law?

The case of the undeadly forecast

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Wilbur had so many physical ailments his medicine cabinet at home looked like a drugstore without sandwiches. The pay-off came, however, when his doctor ventured the opinion that poor old Wilbur had only about 12 to 18 months left to live.

Accepting the forecast stoically, Wilbur took early retirement from his job and proceeded to "live it up" for the remaining period left to him. Well beyond the predicted 18 months, however, Wilbur was still alive. And, if that wasn't sufficiently disconcerting – since he had altered his entire financial situation in contemplation of death – he was still kicking pretty good.

Blaming his financial demise on his failure to demise, Wilbur sued his doctor for damages.

"Because of his improper diagnosis," complained Wilbur in court, "I spent money like there was no tomorrow -- and, obviously, there was."

"When I gave Wilbur my opinion," responded the doctor, "it was based upon actual medical facts and information that I had accumulated about Wilbur over the years that I treated him. And the fact that he didn't die didn't invalidate my opinion."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you hold the doctor liable for forecasting Wilbur's early demise?

This is how the judge ruled: No! The judge held that a most difficult prediction is the length of life under any circumstances. And, if a doctor has an opinion based upon his knowledge of the facts and his patient generally he may express that opinion to his patient without providing the basis of a lawsuit in the event his prediction proves erroneous. There are numerous variables, noted the judge, which exist in human beings.

(Based upon a 1975 New York Supreme Court Decision)

GAINS FOR GAINES

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — One year ago, Wake Forest running back Clark Gaines carried the football 98 times in nine games for 329 yards. After his first two games this season, Gaines picked up 247 yards on 59 rushes to lead the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Gaines gained 124 yards in the opener against Southern Methodist and made 123 yards against North Carolina State.

Network news wants expansion

NEW YORK (AP) — Aside from a bigger budget, network news executives have a dream: To expand their current 30-minute evening news programs on TV to an hour, or at least 45 minutes, each week night.

But a recent survey by Dr. Charles S. Steinberg, a former CBS vice-president for public information, shows the dream may remain just that unless network affiliates have a radical change of heart.

Steinberg, now a communications teacher at Hunter College here, sent a questionnaire to 235 network affiliates that sought, among other things, their views on a longer network evening news program.

He says of 124 stations responding, 80 opposed lengthening nightly network news shows, while only 44 favored expanding the programs.

The study doesn't say why there is such opposition. It's generally because the stations want the time for their own local news programs or for entertainment programs of their own.

Steinberg also queried the affiliates on a more controversial matter — the new, two-hour "family viewing" period intended to reduce sex and violence on TV early at night when young viewers are watching.

He asked if the affiliates thought the new period desirable and if they felt it would tend to "elevate standards of programming."

A total of 120 stations replied to the first question. Seventy-one thought the family viewing period of entertainment programming desirable, while 49 thought it wasn't.

Of 110 stations responding to the second question, 76 felt the family viewing concept wouldn't elevate programming standards, while the minority, 34 stations, felt it would.

Hiatal hernia causes pain

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Your write-up in the paper gave me an answer to my problem. My doctor said I had a hole, but didn't say any more.

I would get what I thought was heartburn just drinking Sanka coffee and eating a piece of toast in the morning. Now I want you to send me The Health Letter on Hiatal Hernia, number 4-8.

I'm 84 years old and am in good health. I have not had an attack in about a month.

DEAR READER — Many people who have "heartburn" really have a regurgitation of acid digestive juice into the lower esophagus. The stomach is coated with a protective mucus that prevents the acid digestive juice from burning its lining, but the lower esophagus (food tube) where it joins the stomach does not.

I'll send you The Health Letter you asked for. It will give you the information you need on living habits to prevent or minimize the burning pain from reflux of acid digestive juice into the lower esophagus. It will also tell you what you need to do about an eating routine for this problem.

Others who want this same information can send in 50 cents for The Health Letter on Hiatal Hernia, Esophageal Reflux, number 4-8. Just send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P. O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing.

About half of the people over 50 years of age have this problem. Often it doesn't cause symptoms at first or the symptoms are mild enough that they are ignored. Good living habits will help avoid complications later.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you please tell me what the symptoms of cancer of the throat, lungs and liver are?

DEAR READER — Apparently many people do not understand that almost any tissue in your body can become a cancer. A cancer is a wild, unorganized growth of cells, which may be thyroid cells, breast cells, liver cells, lung cells, brain cells or any other. The cancer will have some of the cellular characteristics of the normal cells of the organ it started in.

The primary cancer, such as lung cancer, can then spread to other parts of the body and the areas of spread will look much like the original cancer.

The symptoms depend entirely on the type of cancer, where it is located and the amount of spread. A small cancer of the lungs may cause no symptoms at all until it has begun to spread. This is why regular examinations are important. The same may be said of a small, cancerous lump in the breast; other than the lump there are usually no symptoms at first. A small lump in the liver may cause no symptoms. This is unfortunate. If all cancers actually hurt when they started they could be found early and that would lead to life-saving treatment.

Electoral land mine being set for 1976

WASHINGTON — "Many observers believe," asserts National Review publisher William A. Rusher, "the time is opportune for a new major party, consciously designed to replace the Republican Party altogether."

Rusher makes this statement in his book, "The Making of the New Majority Party" (Sheed and Ward, Inc., N.Y., $6.95). When the book was published earlier this year it was greeted by Republican leaders with a long yawn. Conservatives have been talking about such a move for 20 years.

But conservatives like Rusher have now gone beyond the talking stage and are entering into a new era of action because, as Rusher says, "the recent history of the Republican Party is little more than a record of the compromises made by conservative majorities, who knew instinctively how victory could be fashioned, to appease a liberal minority whose sole effective function has been to insure the defeat of conservatism."

This time next year the 1976 presidential election will be coming to a climax. And if Rusher and others have their way the election could be thrown into the U.S. House of Representatives! The electoral land mine being planted to bring this political explosion about is "Operation, Freedom of Choice," a third-party ballot position in all 50 states.

Rusher, in fact, has become the chairman of such an effort, along with former Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) director and now head of the Conservative Caucus, Howard Phillips, and Eli Howell, former political adviser to Alabama Gov. George Wallace.

All three represent a coalition of political, social and populist conservatives — unprecedented in recent political history. Their effort to obtain an independent ballot position well before the political conventions next summer gives the conservatives enormous leverage.

In the past, conservatives in both parties always had been confronted with arguments of party loyalty or the cynical contention that they had nowhere to go. But the rise of independent voters and the coalition of conservatives throw these arguments into doubt.

Conservative leaders believe that the polls showing a majority of Americans identifying themselves as conservatives provide the basis for a "New Majority Party." The third-party ballot line in 1976 is a dramatic move in that direction and a decisive challenge to the Republican and Democratic parties.

Heading up "Operation, Freedom of Choice" will be 36-year-old former Florida prosecuting attorney Ken Rast. The operation will cooperate with Wallace-oriented parties like the American Independent Party and the American Party — which claim that together they have ballot positions in 14 states.

"Our operational objective," Rast told this columnist, "is not to provide a political vehicle for any individual or party, but to have the option available prior to the major party conventions and election next year.

"We are not going to make the mistake of previous elections and engage in intramural domestic detente with the liberals and accommodate to their demands. In 1976 this kind of detente is not going to be part of the political ball game."

Phillips, former OEO director under Nixon, forecast to this columnist what he expects from both parties next year and said he didn't care if "Operation, Freedom of Choice" hurt the Republicans and President Ford next year.

"The American people," he told me, "are going to have a Ford-Rockefeller liberalism and a Kennedy-McGovern liberalism as their choice next year.

Police seek link in murder cases

POPLAR BLUFF — Two weeks ago, Butler County sheriff's deputies listened to four young people tell a bizarre, unbelievable tale. They told of a magazine salesman who gave them a ride, offered them work and then attempted to abduct them at gunpoint.

Their story ended with the shooting death of the salesman and wounding of one of the four during a struggle over the gun. The killing of William G. Hess, the salesman, later was termed justifiable by the county coroner, prosecutor and other investigators.

Deputies, however, still are trying to piece together a jigsaw puzzle picture of the 29-year-old Hess. Particular attention is being paid to the possibility of a connection with the unsolved stabbing death last July of Geneva Hastings.

Deputies Walter Dearing and Bill Taylor stress there is no physical evidence to link Hess with the murder. The sheriff's office and the highway patrol, however, have conducted an intensive investigation into any possible leads in the case since Miss Hastings' body was found last July in woods north of the city.

While the investigation of the past two weeks has produced no physical link between Hess and Miss Hastings, Deputies paint a psychologically grim picture of the dead salesman. He has been described as "psychotic" by a business associate and as "capable of murder" by the woman he lived with.

Hess was a native of Manchester, Okla., a small community on the Oklahoma-Kansas state line. He left there about eight years ago to work for National Circulating Co., a magazine sales group.

J. C. Feist of the Manchester Journal was surprised when he learned of Hess' violent death. "I've known Bill Hess since he was a little kid. He was in the usual mischief, like the rest of us, but he wasn't in any bad trouble round here."

Hess had been married twice, divorced once, and was separated from his second wife.

Deputies said he was living with Laura Torgesen, 21, a member of his sales crew, on a farm on Agee Road. He purchased the farm in March.

Deputies received a good deal of information about Hess from Miss Torgesen. She had been living with Hess, she said, off and on for the past three years. She said she was pregnant with Hess' child when Hess was shot.

"He had started acting strange for the last couple of months, when things started getting bad," Miss Torgesen said. "His wife had a breakdown and he was losing his crew," she said, referring to his sales crew.

A member of the sales crew, John Andrews, was contacted in Iowa. He had left Hess about one year ago, when the crew was in Alaska selling magazines.

"Bill Hess was psychotic," Andrews said. "I left his crew in Alaska with $1.14 in my pocket and I was just happy to get away."

Andrews described an incident in which Hess had pulled a gun on him in a hotel room for taking a bad check from a magazine subscriber.

Investigators believe Hess attempted to use self-hypnosis in an effort to change his personality or self-image.

They found one tape, an apparent hypnosis attempt, in whcih Hess talks to himself, constantly changing from first to second person.

Repeated on the tape are the sentences: "You can do anything anybody else can do, and you can do it better. I believe in myself. I can do anything anybody else can do, and I can do it better. You believe in yourself ...."

Primarily, however, it was the statements by Miss Torgesen that prompted investigators to examine a possible link to the Hastings case.

In statements, Miss Torgesen said she thought it possible that Hess had "cracked."

Miss Torgesen said she had noticed slight changes in Hess throughout the past year. "He was an entirely different person. He talked about sexual fantasies of finding a sweet innocent young girl and taking her to a secluded place and raping her," she said in her statement.

She said he also discussed fantasies of women in bondage and had several books on the subject.

When asked if Hess had ever attempted to get her to engage in such activity, Miss Torgesen said, "No, he knew me better than that. Occasionally he would tease me saying he would tie me to a tree, but it was never serious."

Deputies conducting the investigation of the Geneva Hastings murder said the body was too badly decomposed to determine whether or not she had been sexually assaulted before her death.

There also was a question of whether the young victom had been tied up by her killer. Investigators found a small quantity of rope-like material at the scene where her body was recovered.

That material, and the rope reportedly used by Hess to bind his victims two weeks ago, have been sent to Jefferson City for a comparative laboratory analysis.

Also sent to Jefferson City for analysis was a knife Hess brandished the night of his death. Investigators said its blade matched the description of the weapon believed used to kill Miss Hastings. They stressed, however, that the knife was of a common variety and did not in itself link Hess to the crime. The Hastings murder weapon never was found.

Miss Torgesen said, in the last few weeks of his life, Hess had been subject to severe "temper tantrums." During the tantrums, she said, he would "blow up and holler and scream."

When asked if she thought Hess could have killed Miss Hastings, Miss Torgesen replied, "No. I really don't, even though he was getting a bit kinky. I don't feel it was something he could have done. It would have to be a one-time spontaneous complete breakdown like he did (two weeks ago)."

Deputies are continuing their investigation, contacting those involved with the Hastings case and talking to those who knew Hess.

The deputies, along with Highway Patrol Sgt. M. E. Duckworth, a criminal investigator on the Hastings case, confirm there is a possibility Hess may have been involved in the unsolved murder. So far, however, it is only a possibility.

Electoral land mine being set for 1976

WASHINGTON — "Many observers believe," asserts National Review publisher William A. Rusher, "the time is opportune for a new major party, consciously designed to replace the Republican Party altogether."

Rusher makes this statement in his book, "The Making of the New Majority Party" (Sheed and Ward, Inc., N.Y., $6.95). When the book was published earlier this year it was greeted by Republican leaders with a long yawn. Conservatives have been talking about such a move for 20 years.

But conservatives like Rusher have now gone beyond the talking stage and are entering into a new era of action because, as Rusher says, "the recent history of the Republican Party is little more than a record of the compromises made by conservative majorities, who knew instinctively how victory could be fashioned, to appease a liberal minority whose sole effective function has been to insure the defeat of conservatism."

This time next year the 1976 presidential election will be coming to a climax. And if Rusher and others have their way the election could be thrown into the U.S. House of Representatives! The electoral land mine being planted to bring this political explosion about is "Operation, Freedom of Choice," a third-party ballot position in all 50 states.

If victim has collapsed, place him on his back and kneel astride his hips. With one hand atop the other, place heel of your bottom hand on abdomen slightly above navel and below rib cage. Press with quick upward thrust, repeating several times if necessary. Should victim vomit, quickly place him on his side and wipe out his mouth.

How to use the 'Fist of Life'

Each year nearly 4,000 healthy Americans strangle from food stuck in their throats, making choking the sixth leading cause of accidental death, says the Cincinnati surgeon who developed a simple technique credited with saving hundreds of lives already.

The "Heimlich Maneuver," often called "the fist of life," compresses the lungs and increases the air pressure in the windpipe, thereby forcing the obstructing food or object to fly out much like popping a champagne cork.

THIS WEEK the American Medical Association's Commission on Emergency Medical Services endorsed the new technique, particularly as an alternative to a tracheotomy when attempts to remove the object with the fingers have failed.

Dr. Henry J. Heimlich, of Cincinnati's Jewish Hospital, gives the following directions for the "fist of life:"

—Stand behind the choking victim and wrap your arms around his waist.

—GRASP YOUR fist with your other hand and place the thumb side of your fist against the victim's adbomen, slightly above the navel and below the rib cage.

—Press your fist into the victim's abdomen with a quick upward thrust. Repeat several times if necessary, until the food is expelled.

And Heimlich notes that a choking person can save his own life by pressing his fist into his own abdomen or hitting his abdomen against a chair, table or sink edge.

THE KEY TO treatment is speed — the choking victim usually dies within minutes. Slapping the victim on the back is futile, as is the administration of oxygen or mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

Attempting to remove the obstructing object by reaching into the throat with one's fingers or an instrument is effective only if the entire object is retrieved, and tracheotomy should not be attempted by the untrained.

Because choking is often confused with a heart attack (hence the misnomer, "cafe coronary"), Heimlich suggests the use of a universal signal: grasping the throat between the thumb and forefinger to let those around you know you are choking on something.

Auto insurance cost increases just beginning

Automobile owners have been hit by sharp increases in the cost of car insurance this year and there are indications that the spiral has only just begun. The industry says the price rises are due to inflation, more accidents and a growing number of lawsuits.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported that the cost of auto insurance as measured by the Consumer Price Index went up 1.3 per cent in August, when the over-all cost of living rose two-tenths of a per cent.

The auto insurance increase for the first eight months of 1975 is over 5 per cent, compared to a 4.6 per cent seasonally adjusted boost in the over-all price index. Auto insurance went up only seven-tenths of a per cent in all of 1974.

No-fault auto insurance has helped limit the increases in some areas by cutting the number of lawsuits. Robert Rowe, Michigan's deputy insurance commissioner, said, for example, that premiums in his state have remained fairly stable since no-fault took effect in 1973. Without no-fault, he said, there would have been sharp increases.

But no-fault generally applies only to bodily injury; property damage is not covered. And insurance companies estimate that two-thirds of your premium goes to pay for property damage claims.

In addition, only 14 states have strict enough restrictions on lawsuits and high enough coverage to be called true no-fault.

Asked to explain the latest increases, insurance companies say that their rates generally have remained stable for the last four years while their costs have been going up. They say the latest round of increases is just the beginning of a trend.

A spokesman for the Insurance Information Institute said auto insurance rates first were limited by wage and price controls. Even after the end of controls, "the business was doing pretty well." There was no need to raise rates.

The number of accidents declined, helping to offset increases in the cost of things like replacement parts for damaged cars and the insurance companies' overhead.

Then came 1974. The number of accidents started going up, although no one knows why. "We're at a loss to explain it," said a spokesman for State Farm Insurance Cos., the nation's largest auto insurer.

The 55-mile-an-hour speed limit helped cut the number of deaths, but it did not lower the number of fender-benders and other accidents.

State Farm said that in 1970, the company had about 98 property damage liability claims per 1,000 policies. The frequency declined steadily and by the middle of 1974, based on statistics from the first half of the year, the company was predicting just over 75 claims per 1,000 policies. The trend changed, however, in the second half of 1974 and the anticipated 1975 rate is 77 claims per

Few attend anti-crime hearing

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Are Missourians concerned about crime?

Some members of the Missouri Action Plan for Public Safety (MAPPS) may have been wondering just that Tuesday night, as only 43 persons showed up for the first of six hearings on anti-crime recommendations.

Six MAPPS task forces, covering police, juvenile delinquency, criminal justice information, corrections, courts and community crime prevention, have been meeting periodically since July, and they have developed various preliminary anti-crime recommendations. Tuesday night's three-hour hearing was the first of six to be held throughout the state to gather citizen reaction to the MAPPS recommendations, which range from registering handguns to a requirement for minimum standards for police officers.

Michael D. Garrett, public safety director,r, said he was "disappointed" with the turnout, and said he feared that it showed public disinterest in crime problems. He hoped, however, that interest would be created through Tuesday's meeting and that more persons would turn out at the other hearings in Kansas City, St. Louis, Kirksville, Springfield and Cape Girardeau.

The Community Criime Prevention Task Force recommendation that handguns be registered and that a mandatory prison sentence be given for the use of a handgun drew most of the comment.

Michael McCabe, a member of the National Rifle Association but speaking as an individual, said handgun regisration was not a practical or effective method of preventing or solving crime, and that if implemented its high costs would be a burden on the taxpayers.

"You've picked one of the most expensive ones which has a very spotty track record," McCabe said, in referring to the various crime control measures available to the task force.

Nancy Eisenstein, a member of the St. Louis Women's Crusade Against Crime and an advisor to the task force, noted that half of all murders are committed with handguns. She said the feeling of the task force's members was that the handgun registration recommendation would not stop violent crime, but that it would aid police officers in tracking down criminals.

Ed Stegner, executive director of the Conservation Federation of Missouri, a hunters' group, said criminals will not register their weapons if the recommendation is implemented. He added, however, that he was in favor of the mandatory sentence for the use of a handgun during the commission of a crime.

The six MAPPS task forces are made up of about 200 persons from various walks of life, including police officers, lawyers, social service workers and private citizens. Comments made at the public hearings will be considered by each task force before their recommendations are put into final form and submitted for implementation to the state and its political subdivisions. Many of the proposed recommendations would need to be approved and funded by the General Assembly.

The MAPPS project is coordinated by the Missouri Department of Public Safety and is funded by a grant from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

William Lindsey, the organizer of an anti-crime citizens group in Columbia, said he was "aggravated by the libertarian attitudes of our corrections officials.

"We don't want more parks that aren't safe until there are enough prisons to hold all the criminals," he said.

But Ewald Richter, a spokesman for the Missouri Bar Association, questioned Lindsey, "Where are the good judges in Columbia supposed to send the criminals?"

"Do you expect the judges to put the prisoners in their pockets and take them home with them?" Richter asked. He said it was up to community residents to insure that jail space is available to keep criminals behind bars.

A proposal requiring minimum training standards for police officers drew fire from Joe Rackers, mayor of the nearby village of Taos.

He said the three part-time officers on his village police force would not have the time to meet the standards, and that the village's budget of between $35,000 and $40,000 would not be able to pay them after they completed their required police training.

If victim has collapsed, place him on his back and kneel astride his hips. With one hand atop the other, place heel of your bottom hand on abdomen slightly above navel and below rib cage. Press with quick upward thrust, repeating several times if necessary. Should victim vomit, quickly place him on his side and wipe out his mouth.

How to use the 'Fist of Life'

Each year nearly 4,000 healthy Americans strangle from food stuck in their throats, making choking the sixth leading cause of accidental death, says the Cincinnati surgeon who developed a simple technique credited with saving hundreds of lives already.

The "Heimlich Maneuver," often called "the fist of life," compresses the lungs and increases the air pressure in the windpipe, thereby forcing the obstructing food or object to fly out much like popping a champagne cork.

THIS WEEK the American Medical Association's Commission on Emergency Medical Services endorsed the new technique, particularly as an alternative to a tracheotomy when attempts to remove the object with the fingers have failed.

Dr. Henry J. Heimlich, of Cincinnati's Jewish Hospital, gives the following directions for the "fist of life:"

—Stand behind the choking victim and wrap your arms around his waist.

—GRASP YOUR fist with your other hand and place the thumb side of your fist against the victim's adbomen, slightly above the navel and below the rib cage.

—Press your fist into the victim's abdomen with a quick upward thrust. Repeat several times if necessary, until the food is expelled.

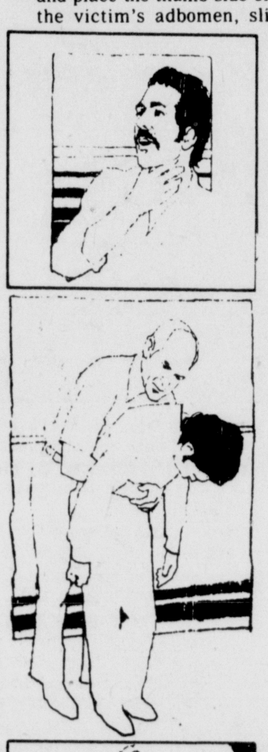
The technique can also be used on a horizontal victim (see drawings).

And Heimlich notes that a choking person can save his own life by pressing his fist into his own abdomen or hitting his abdomen against a chair, table or sink edge.

THE KEY TO treatment is speed — the choking victim usually dies within minutes. Slapping the victim on the back is futile, as is the administration of oxygen or mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

Attempting to remove the obstructing object by reaching into the throat with one's fingers or an instrument is effective only if the entire object is retrieved, and tracheotomy should not be attempted by the untrained.

Because choking is often confused with a heart attack (hence the misnomer, "cafe coronary"), Heimlich suggests the use of a universal signal: grasping the throat between the thumb and forefinger to let those around you know you are choking on something.



Grasping throat, top, signals that person is choking. Rescuer should wrap his arms around the victim's middle. Grasp your fist with your other hand and place the thumb side of your fist against victim's abdomen, slightly above navel and below rib cage (bottom). Press fist into victim's abdomen with quick upward thrust to "pop" food out.

Auto insurance cost increases just beginning

Automobile owners have been hit by sharp increases in the cost of car insurance this year and there are indications that the spiral has only just begun. The industry says the price rises are due to inflation, more accidents and a growing number of lawsuits.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported that the cost of auto insurance as measured by the Consumer Price Index went up 1.3 per cent in August, when the over-all cost of living rose two-tenths of a per cent.

The auto insurance increase for the first eight months of 1975 is over 5 per cent, compared to a 4.6 per cent seasonally adjusted boost in the over-all price index. Auto insurance went up only seven-tenths of a per cent in all of 1974.

No-fault auto insurance has helped limit the increases in some areas by cutting the number of lawsuits. Robert Rowe, Michigan's deputy insurance commissioner, said, for example, that premiums in his state have remained fairly stable since no-fault took effect in 1973. Without no-fault, he said, there would have been sharp increases.

But no-fault generally applies only to bodily injury; property damage is not covered. And insurance companies estimate that two-thirds of your premium goes to pay for property damage claims.

In addition, only 14 states have strict enough restrictions on lawsuits and high enough coverage to be called true no-fault.

Asked to explain the latest increases, insurance companies say that their rates generally have remained stable for the last four years while their costs have been going up. They say the latest round of increases is just the beginning of a trend.

A spokesman for the Insurance Information Institute said auto insurance rates first were limited by wage and price controls. Even after the end of controls, "the business was doing pretty well." There was no need to raise rates.

The number of accidents declined, helping to offset increases in the cost of things like replacement parts for damaged cars and the insurance companies' overhead.

Then came 1974. The number of accidents started going up, although no one knows why. "We're at a loss to explain it," said a spokesman for State Farm Insurance Cos., the nation's largest auto insurer.

The 55-mile-an-hour speed limit helped cut the number of deaths, but it did not lower the number of fender-benders and other accidents.

State Farm said that in 1970, the company had about 98 property damage liability claims per 1,000 policies. The frequency declined steadily and by the middle of 1974, based on statistics from the first half of the year, the company was predicting just over 75 claims per 1,000 policies. The trend changed, however, in the second half of 1974 and the anticipated 1975 rate is 77 claims per

Few attend anti-crime hearing

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Are Missourians concerned about crime?

Some members of the Missouri Action Plan for Public Safety (MAPPS) may have been wondering just that Tuesday night, as only 43 persons showed up for the first of six hearings on anti-crime recommendations.

Six MAPPS task forces, covering police, juvenile delinquency, criminal justice information, corrections, courts and community crime prevention, have been meeting periodically since July, and they have developed various preliminary anti-crime recommendations. Tuesday night's three-hour hearing was the first of six to be held throughout the state to gather citizen reaction to the MAPPS recommendations, which range from registering handguns to a requirement for minimum standards for police officers.

Michael D. Garrett, public safety director,r, said he was "disappointed" with the turnout, and said he feared that it showed public disinterest in crime problems. He hoped, however, that interest would be created through Tuesday's meeting and that more persons would turn out at the other hearings in Kansas City, St. Louis, Kirksville, Springfield and Cape Girardeau.

The Community Criime Prevention Task Force recommendation that handguns be registered and that a mandatory prison sentence be given for the use of a handgun drew most of the comment.

Michael McCabe, a member of the National Rifle Association but speaking as an individual, said handgun regisration was not a practical or effective method of preventing or solving crime, and that if implemented its high costs would be a burden on the taxpayers.

"You've picked one of the most expensive ones which has a very spotty track record," McCabe said, in referring to the various crime control measures available to the task force.

Nancy Eisenstein, a member of the St. Louis Women's Crusade Against Crime and an advisor to the task force, noted that half of all murders are committed with handguns. She said the feeling of the task force's members was that the handgun registration recommendation would not stop violent crime, but that it would aid police officers in tracking down criminals.

Ed Stegner, executive director of the Conservation Federation of Missouri, a hunters' group, said criminals will not register their weapons if the recommendation is implemented. He added, however, that he was in favor of the mandatory sentence for the use of a handgun during the commission of a crime.

The six MAPPS task forces are made up of about 200 persons from various walks of life, including police officers, lawyers, social service workers and private citizens. Comments made at the public hearings will be considered by each task force before their recommendations are put into final form and submitted for implementation to the state and its political subdivisions. Many of the proposed recommendations would need to be approved and funded by the General Assembly.

The MAPPS project is coordinated by the Missouri Department of Public Safety and is funded by a grant from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

William Lindsey, the organizer of an anti-crime citizens group in Columbia, said he was "aggravated by the libertarian attitudes of our corrections officials.

"We don't want more parks that aren't safe until there are enough prisons to hold all the criminals," he said.

But Ewald Richter, a spokesman for the Missouri Bar Association, questioned Lindsey, "Where are the good judges in Columbia supposed to send the criminals?"

"Do you expect the judges to put the prisoners in their pockets and take them home with them?" Richter asked. He said it was up to community residents to insure that jail space is available to keep criminals behind bars.

A proposal requiring minimum training standards for police officers drew fire from Joe Rackers, mayor of the nearby village of Taos.

He said the three part-time officers on his village police force would not have the time to meet the standards, and that the village's budget of between $35,000 and $40,000 would not be able to pay them after they completed their required police training.

Man and woman remember time with UFO pair

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A Charlotte man says he and his wife two years ago entertained the man and woman identified by authorities as leaders of a mysterious Jesus-Outer Space cult.

William Conder said Marshall Herff Applewhite, 43, and a woman identified as "Bonnie Applewhite" said they had been traveling about the U.S. and abroad "learning and preparing ourselves for another life that's on a higher level."

Authorities have identified Applewhite's companion as Bonnie Lee Trousdale Nettles, 48.

Conder said he invited the couple to his home in November 1973 after their car had broken down. He said he and his wife entertained them for about seven hours.

Authorities in California, Oregon and Colorado became interested in the pair when a number of persons apparently disappeared after being told they should forget everything and leave earth on a spaceship to meet their saviour.

However, the pair has not been charged in connection with the disappearances.

Conder said neither Applewhite nor the woman attempted to proselytize them. However, he said that in response to a question, Applewhite claimed he had been contacted by "aliens" and told to prepare for a mysterious transition to a higher order of life.

"He said he had been contacted by aliens in some national park, I believe in Oregon," Conder said. "He said he was walking along a trail, it was cold and there was snow on the ground. All of a sudden he got so hot he took his jacket off and there was a burning bush.

"The spirit that made it so warm gave him a message that he should try to improve himself."

Conder said he met the couple when they came to an auto parts store where he was working and asked the location of a certain garage.

Conder said he told them the garage was a long distance away and offered to try to fix their car. After failing to start the car, he took the couple to his home for supper.

He said Applewhite told him they had to catch a plane that night for Oregon and he had planned to sell the car in Charlotte. In return for his hospitality, Conder says Applewhite gave him the car, a 1961 Ford station wagon bearing Oregon license plates.

Conder then drove the couple to the airport, he said.

Conder said the car contained numerous papers, including astrological charts, as well as tools, clothing and camping gear. He said several charts were apparently for Applewhite, indicating he was born in Spur, Tex., in 1931, although the actual date varied.

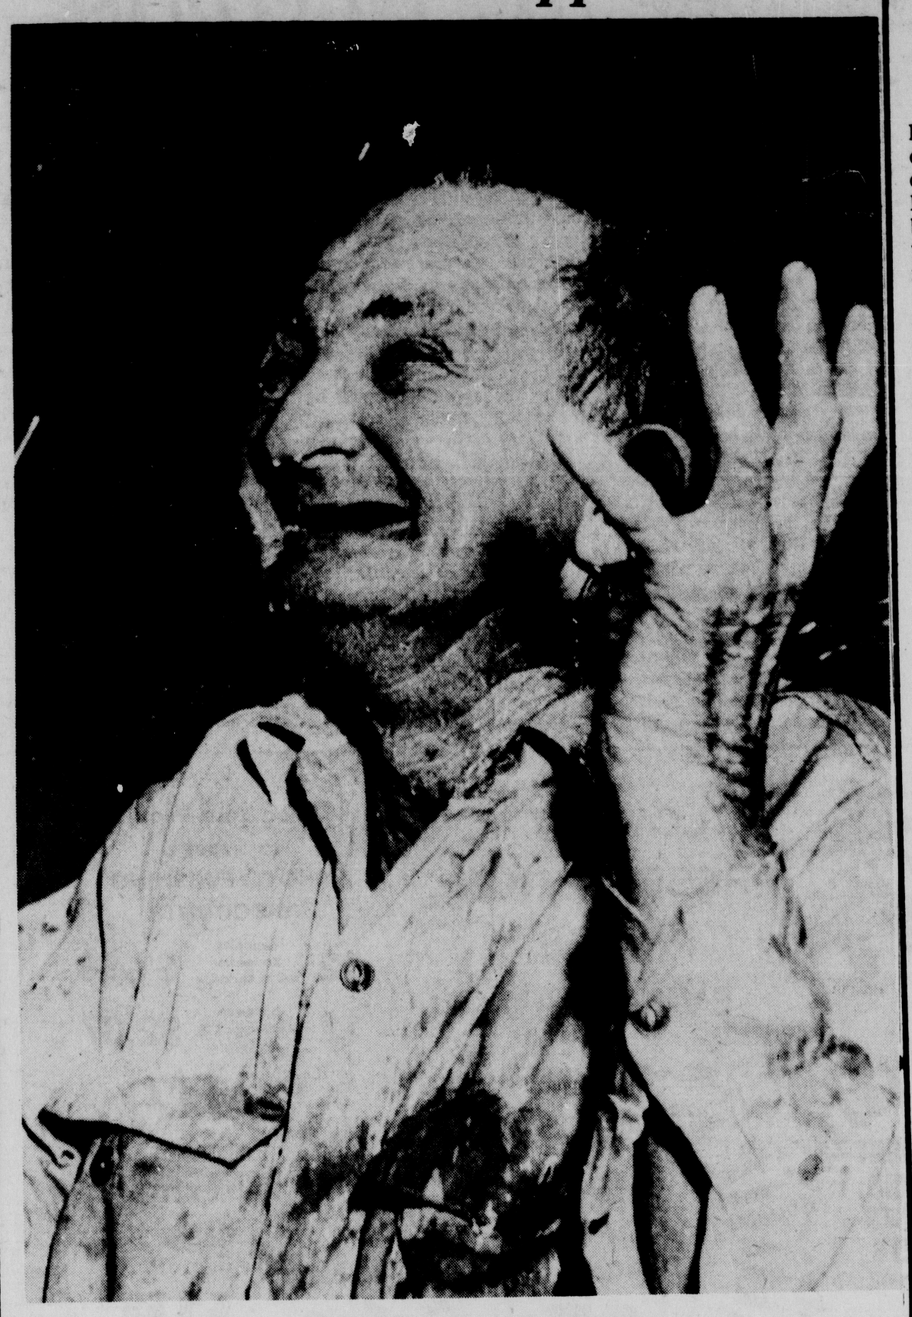
The instant it happened



Hallelujah!

For all the rest of his life Sam Smith, farmer, would remember Easter Saturday, March 24, 1951, as the day it rained.

To a Texas farmer, drought is his most merciless enemy. Surely it is the most sinister. Unlike other natural perils — tornado, hail storm, brush fire — the drought does its evil by degrees. It tortures the earth bit by bit, inexorably, so that the farmer can never tell the exact day the cottonwood tree died, the precise hour the stock tank went dry, the specific moment the crack opened in his pasture wide enough to swallow a calf. In a long drought, the death of the earth is agonizingly slow and painful.

By the spring of 1951, Texans have endured seven years of drought. Seven years of watching crops die aborning, cattle die, wells go dry, seven years of watching great dust clouds lift on the hot afternoon breeze and turn the setting sun into a mocking sky of fire from horizon to horizon, day after day. This spring even the deep-rooted oaks are giving up the struggle, withholding their leaf buds for the first time in memory as every day for a solid month the temperature goes over 100 degrees without a drop of rain.

And on Easter Saturday ...

As the rain begins, the excitement in the news room of the San Antonio Light is as unrestrained as on the outlying farms. Reporters, editors, deskmen, secretaries rush to the windows to watch. Harvey Belgin, photographer, gets in his car and heads for the vegetable belt southwest of the city, where the fields are most severely parched. Along the way he sees children playing deliriously in mud puddles, men and women running around joyously in their yards. Then he sees Sam Smith standing next to his fence, standing in the rain, rejoicing. Harvey Belgin gets out of his car and shoots two pictures. Usually he shoots at least a half dozen to assure a good selection. "I don't know why I even bothered to shoot the second one," he says later. "I knew I had what I wanted when I saw the old man through the view finder. The rain meant life to him and his face showed it. I said, "Well, that's it,' and went back to the office."

Suit questions standards at Fulton

By WILLIAM WEARY
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — A St. Louis Legal Aid Society suit charging substandard conditions at Fulton State Hospital's Biggs Building has brought the national controversy over mental patients' rights to Missouri.

Missouri courts send the criminally insane, disturbed penitnetiary prisoners, psychopaths and those awaiting pre-trial psychiatric examinations to the Biggs Building.

The society has filed a class-action suit in federal court that makes all Biggs' residents plaintiffs against the Missouri Department of Mental Health.

In 1971, a federal court in Alabama ruled that persons in mental hospitals and similar facilities performing "institution-maintaining labor" (janitorial, kitchen and other in-house work) must be paid the minimum wage. The suit charges that ruling is not being followed.

Biggs has paid its residents for work since 1974 but the society seeks back wages from 1970 and payment for residents' ward clean-ups, which still are uncompensated.

"We look upon that work as therapy more than anything else," says Joe Mangini, a psychiatric social worker at Biggs.

"If a guy is going to make it out there he has to learn things like being punctual and getting along with his peers. This gives them a chance to do these things."

Mangini says that more people want paid jobs than are available. Currently 15 to 20 are on a waiting list, he says.

The suit also questions Biggs' mail-opening policies. Administrators say all mail sent to residents is opened to check for drugs and other contraband. All outgoing mail also is opened, except envelopes addressed to lawyers, legislators and governmental agencies.

The latter correspondence is kept sealed in respect for a resident's efforts to secure release.

"We don't want to look at their mail but we want to keep problems out of the community," says Dr. Henry Bratkowski, clinical director of Biggs. "The worse thing is when they send threatening letters to people they don't know."

Bratkowski says that as many as four threats to the President of the United States have gone out from Biggs in past years, sending a flurry of FBI agents to Fulton.

"It's a real hassle for us to go through the records when that happens," Bratkowski says. "They (the agents) still come in periodcally to check."

Adequate medical or psychiatric treatment for Biggs' residents is also in question. The brief states Biggs doesn't provide for "individualized treatment plans. . . a thorough physical and mental examination. . . or periodic reviews of (a resident's) progress."

Administrators counter by pointing to the three full-time physicians, one full-time dentist and each resident's meeting with his "team", a 10-man staff committee representing every in-house profession from a psychiatrist and social worker to art, music and occupational therapists. There are 10 teams at Biggs and they meet with each resident every six months.

"I'd like to have it every four months," says Dr. Richard Jacks, former clinical director.

Despite the apparent proliferation of experts for residents' evaluation teams, the society complains about lack of adequate staffing at Biggs.

An Alabama federal court decision said there should be one full-time psychiatrist for every 50 residents, but Biggs has only two full-time and two part-time psychiatrists for its entire population of 250.

"We can only do so much with what legislation does for us," says Bratkowski. "It's a question of funding."

"When they have this understaffing, they put the patients' safety in jeopardy," says Biggs' residents Ruffus Bright.

He says a homosexual rape occurred because psychiatric aides weren't available to stop it. "You have one aide on the floor with 30 patients and that's too many."

The Society's brief says the grouping of retarded and juvenile residents with older offenders causes rapes, but administrators insist aggressive homosexuals are separated from weaker residents.

Understaffing, according to the Society, has also caused "excessive reliance by (Biggs' doctors). . . in the use of psychotrophic drugs, not as part of the patients' treatment plan but as a form of crowd control."

Psychotrophic drugs, says legal Aid society attorney William Hyde, are "really powerful drugs that can have adverse side effects and can make (residents), in my opinion, walking zombies. It makes them easier to control."

Latest records at Biggs show 22 residents were on drugs like thorasin and prolixin, says Jacks. He says he has no reservations about using such drugs for a "delusional or psychotic" person.

Psychotrophic drugs do not completely numb a person's mind, Jacks says, but make him more accessible to counseling and other treatments. He admits there is an outward zombie-like effect.

Biggs' vocational-education programs have come under Legal Aid scrutiny also. Residents "have no reasonable likelihood of survival in the labor market when discharged," the Society says.

There is a vocational shop in Biggs which offers small engine repair, drafting, carpentry (they build houses to scale model) and welding. The shop has a milling machine, lathes, grinders, drill presses and a complete line of hand tools.

About 25 residents currently participate in a shop program. The others either choose not to, or they already have a skill.

"I can put a man into a position where he can be a carpenter's helper," says Ralph Hader, a vocational education instructor at Biggs. "A journeyman carpenter takes four years. . . and most aren't here that long."

Green book lists society

WASHINGTON (AP) — David and Julie Eisenhower are still in and Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas is still out as the new Washington social list comes off the presses.

The 1976 edition of the Green Book, known by its kelly green suede cover, reflects officialdom in President Ford's Washington.

Anyone who is newly divorced or separated is automatically excluded. So are those who have moved from the capital or become victims of "unpleasant notoriety," such as that surrounding most Watergate figures.

A Green Book staff member said there are two new black members: The Most Rev. Eugene A. Marino, auxiliary Roman Catholic bishop of Washington, and Dr. William W. Funderburk, professor of surgery at Howard Unversity, and his wife.

Nelson A. Rockefeller's address is listed as the Naval Observatory, the new official residence for the vice president, but he has never spent a night there.

Carolyn Hagner Shaw, the 71-year-old arbiter of the social list, says this is the first year in many that no one has been deleted for such naughtiness as divorce or other notoriety.

Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., is still in the book despite his episodes with stripper Fanne Fox, events Mills later attributed to alcoholism.

"We never touch the Senate or House of Representatives," Mrs. Shaw said.

But when Adam Clayton Powell, who died in 1972, was removed from his congressional seat for misusing funds and defying the courts, he was also removed from the book.

The Supreme Court eventually ruled that the House exceeded its powers by denying Powell his seat, and he returned for a final term in 1968. Two years later he was re-instated in the Green Book.

Mrs. William Proxmire, wife of the Democratic senator from Wisconsin, is back in. She and Proxmire, separated for a while, are back together.

Justice Douglas was deleted from the list on the eve of his most recent marriage, his fourth, to a much younger woman almost 10 years ago. He hasn't made it back into the Green Book yet.

Mrs. Shaw said that although her book is called the "Social List of Washington," it is misleading.

"What is society today?" she asked. "There isn't any. Being fairly well along in years and old-fashioned to boot, it seems that no one has any manners anymore. I fight like crazy to keep some of the dignity that's gone."

The book, which was started 45 years ago by Mrs. Shaw's mother, includes instructions on such niceties as how to address ambassadors — "My dear Mr. Ambassador" — or the only female cabinet member, Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, Carla A. Hills — "My dear Madame Secretary."

Mogollon is the name of the prehistoric Indians who lived in southeastern Arizona and New Mexico from about 500 B.C. to A.D. 1200. Scientists believe they disappeared about 1250.

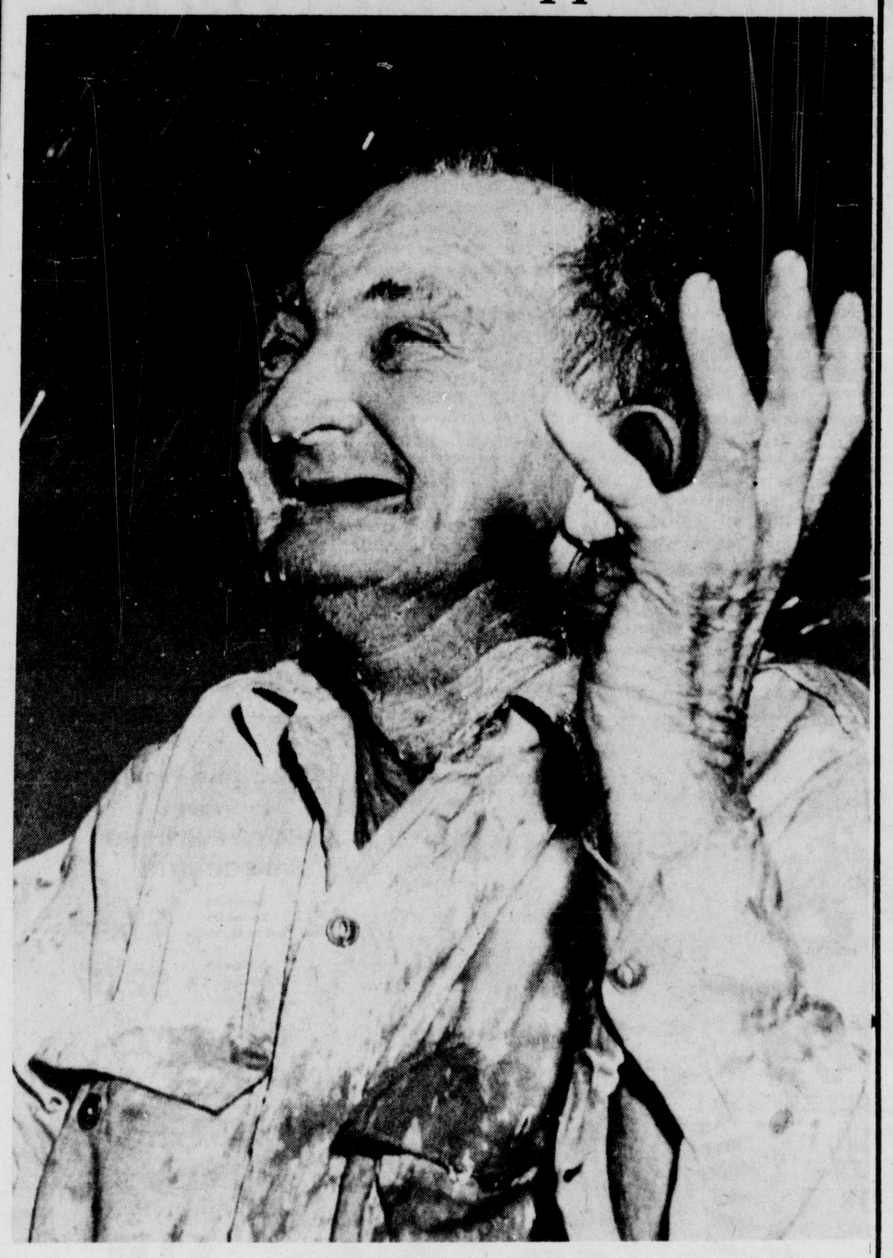
The instant it happened



Hallelujah!

For all the rest of his life Sam Smith, farmer, would remember Easter Saturday, March 24, 1951, as the day it rained.

To a Texas farmer, drought is his most merciless enemy. Surely it is the most sinister. Unlike other natural perils — tornado, hail storm, brush fire — the drought does its evil by degrees. It tortures the earth bit by bit, inexorably, so that the farmer can never tell the exact day the cottonwood tree died, the precise hour the stock tank went dry, the specific moment the crack opened in his pasture wide enough to swallow a calf. In a long drought, the death of the earth is agonizingly slow and painful.

By the spring of 1951, Texans have endured seven years of drought. Seven years of watching crops die aborning, cattle die, wells go dry, seven years of watching great dust clouds lift on the hot afternoon breeze and turn the setting sun into a mocking sky of fire from horizon to horizon, day after day. This spring even the deep-rooted oaks are giving up the struggle, withholding their leaf buds for the first time in memory as every day for a solid month the temperature goes over 100 degrees without a drop of rain.

And on Easter Saturday ...

As the rain begins, the excitement in the news room of the San Antonio Light is as unrestrained as on the outlying farms. Reporters, editors, deskmen, secretaries rush to the windows to watch. Harvey Belgin, photographer, gets in his car and heads for the vegetable belt southwest of the city, where the fields are most severely parched. Along the way he sees children playing deliriously in mud puddles, men and women running around joyously in their yards. Then he sees Sam Smith standing next to his fence, standing in the rain, rejoicing. Harvey Belgin gets out of his car and shoots two pictures. Usually he shoots at least a half dozen to assure a good selection. "I don't know why I even bothered to shoot the second one," he says later. "I knew I had what I wanted when I saw the old man through the view finder. The rain meant life to him and his face showed it. I said, "Well, that's it,' and went back to the office."

Suit questions standards at Fulton

By WILLIAM WEARY
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — A St. Louis Legal Aid Society suit charging substandard conditions at Fulton State Hospital's Biggs Building has brought the national controversy over mental patients' rights to Missouri.

Missouri courts send the criminally insane, disturbed penitnetiary prisoners, psychopaths and those awaiting pre-trial psychiatric examinations to the Biggs Building.

The society has filed a class-action suit in federal court that makes all Biggs' residents plaintiffs against the Missouri Department of Mental Health.

In 1971, a federal court in Alabama ruled that persons in mental hospitals and similar facilities performing "institution-maintaining labor" (janitorial, kitchen and other in-house work) must be paid the minimum wage. The suit charges that ruling is not being followed.

Biggs has paid its residents for work since 1974 but the society seeks back wages from 1970 and payment for residents' ward clean-ups, which still are uncompensated.

"We look upon that work as therapy more than anything else," says Joe Mangini, a psychiatric social worker at Biggs.

"If a guy is going to make it out there he has to learn things like being punctual and getting along with his peers. This gives them a chance to do these things."

Mangini says that more people want paid jobs than are available. Currently 15 to 20 are on a waiting list, he says.

The suit also questions Biggs' mail-opening policies. Administrators say all mail sent to residents is opened to check for drugs and other contraband. All outgoing mail also is opened, except envelopes addressed to lawyers, legislators and governmental agencies.

The latter correspondence is kept sealed in respect for a resident's efforts to secure release.

"We don't want to look at their mail but we want to keep problems out of the community," says Dr. Henry Bratkowski, clinical director of Biggs. "The worse thing is when they send threatening letters to people they don't know."

Bratkowski says that as many as four threats to the President of the United States have gone out from Biggs in past years, sending a flurry of FBI agents to Fulton.

"It's a real hassle for us to go through the records when that happens," Bratkowski says. "They (the agents) still come in periodcally to check."

Adequate medical or psychiatric treatment for Biggs' residents is also in question. The brief states Biggs doesn't provide for "individualized treatment plans. . . a thorough physical and mental examination. . . or periodic reviews of (a resident's) progress."

Administrators counter by pointing to the three full-time physicians, one full-time dentist and each resident's meeting with his "team", a 10-man staff committee representing every in-house profession from a psychiatrist and social worker to art, music and occupational therapists. There are 10 teams at Biggs and they meet with each resident every six months.

"I'd like to have it every four months," says Dr. Richard Jacks, former clinical director.

Despite the apparent proliferation of experts for residents' evaluation teams, the society complains about lack of adequate staffing at Biggs.

An Alabama federal court decision said there should be one full-time psychiatrist for every 50 residents, but Biggs has only two full-time and two part-time psychiatrists for its entire population of 250.

"We can only do so much with what legislation does for us," says Bratkowski. "It's a question of funding."

"When they have this understaffing, they put the patients' safety in jeopardy," says Biggs' residents Ruffus Bright.

He says a homosexual rape occurred because psychiatric aides weren't available to stop it. "You have one aide on the floor with 30 patients and that's too many."

The Society's brief says the grouping of retarded and juvenile residents with older offenders causes rapes, but administrators insist aggressive homosexuals are separated from weaker residents.

Understaffing, according to the Society, has also caused "excessive reliance by (Biggs' doctors). . . in the use of psychotrophic drugs, not as part of the patients' treatment plan but as a form of crowd control."

Psychotrophic drugs, says legal Aid society attorney William Hyde, are "really powerful drugs that can have adverse side effects and can make (residents), in my opinion, walking zombies. It makes them easier to control."

Latest records at Biggs show 22 residents were on drugs like thorasin and prolixin, says Jacks. He says he has no reservations about using such drugs for a "delusional or psychotic" person.

Psychotrophic drugs do not completely numb a person's mind, Jacks says, but make him more accessible to counseling and other treatments. He admits there is an outward zombie-like effect.

Biggs' vocational-education programs have come under Legal Aid scrutiny also. Residents "have no reasonable likelihood of survival in the labor market when discharged," the Society says.

There is a vocational shop in Biggs which offers small engine repair, drafting, carpentry (they build houses to scale model) and welding. The shop has a milling machine, lathes, grinders, drill presses and a complete line of hand tools.

About 25 residents currently participate in a shop program. The others either choose not to, or they already have a skill.

"I can put a man into a position where he can be a carpenter's helper," says Ralph Hader, a vocational education instructor at Biggs. "A journeyman carpenter takes four years. . . and most aren't here that long."

Green book lists society

WASHINGTON (AP) — David and Julie Eisenhower are still in and Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas is still out as the new Washington social list comes off the presses.

The 1976 edition of the Green Book, known by its kelly green suede cover, reflects officialdom in President Ford's Washington.

Anyone who is newly divorced or separated is automatically excluded. So are those who have moved from the capital or become victims of "unpleasant notoriety," such as that surrounding most Watergate figures.

A Green Book staff member said there are two new black members: The Most Rev. Eugene A. Marino, auxiliary Roman Catholic bishop of Washington, and Dr. William W. Funderburk, professor of surgery at Howard Unversity, and his wife.

Nelson A. Rockefeller's address is listed as the Naval Observatory, the new official residence for the vice president, but he has never spent a night there.

Carolyn Hagner Shaw, the 71-year-old arbiter of the social list, says this is the first year in many that no one has been deleted for such naughtiness as divorce or other notoriety.

Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., is still in the book despite his episodes with stripper Fanne Fox, events Mills later attributed to alcoholism.

"We never touch the Senate or House of Representatives," Mrs. Shaw said.

But when Adam Clayton Powell, who died in 1972, was removed from his congressional seat for misusing funds and defying the courts, he was also removed from the book.

The Supreme Court eventually ruled that the House exceeded its powers by denying Powell his seat, and he returned for a final term in 1968. Two years later he was re-instated in the Green Book.

Mrs. William Proxmire, wife of the Democratic senator from Wisconsin, is back in. She and Proxmire, separated for a while, are back together.

Justice Douglas was deleted from the list on the eve of his most recent marriage, his fourth, to a much younger woman almost 10 years ago. He hasn't made it back into the Green Book yet.

Mrs. Shaw said that although her book is called the "Social List of Washington," it is misleading.

"What is society today?" she asked. "There isn't any. Being fairly well along in years and old-fashioned to boot, it seems that no one has any manners anymore. I fight like crazy to keep some of the dignity that's gone."

The book, which was started 45 years ago by Mrs. Shaw's mother, includes instructions on such niceties as how to address ambassadors — "My dear Mr. Ambassador" — or the only female cabinet member, Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, Carla A. Hills — "My dear Madame Secretary."

Mogollon is the name of the prehistoric Indians who lived in southeastern Arizona and New Mexico from about 500 B.C. to A.D. 1200. Scientists believe they disappeared about 1250.

Clean air may choke free enterprise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Being for clean air is as American as hot dogs and apple pie. But some say too much good air can choke another American institution — free enterprise.

Separate House and Senate committees are trying to decide where to draw that cloudy line between how much pollution is economically necessary for industry and how much is bad for consumer health.

The House Commerce Committee's health panel is writing changes in the 1970 Clean Air Act that would affect household, industrial and vehicular pollutants. It hopes to approve a middle-of-the-road bill this week.

The environmental pollution subcommittee of Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, is still plugging away.

Leon Billings, senior staffer on Muskie's panel, said of attempts to resolve economic and environmental differences: "Sometimes there's just no way you can do it — it's too thick and too complicated. It's a good thing to have fine quality air, but at the same time nobody wants to close the country down."

The House legislation, which has taken eight months to write, would delay implementation of tougher automobile emission standards, limit increases in pollution in areas now relatively clean and require studies to determine the risks of aerosols, fluorocarbons and possible cancer-related pollutants.

The Ford administration — citing the economy and lack of technology — had asked Congress to delay final auto emission controls until the 1982 model year. The subcommittee agreed to postpone those final controls until model year 1980.

But the subcommittee agreed the Environmental Protection Agency may grant a year-by-year suspension up to 1985 of the nitrogen oxide pollutant regulations if technology is unavailable or if an excessive fuel penalty would fall on motorists.

The EPA would be required to prescribe emission standards for 1978-82 heavy-duty trucks, buses and motorcycles. From 1983 on, standards must require a 90 per cent reduction of hydrocarbons, carbon monoxide and nitrogen oxides from uncontrolled levels. But the EPA could delay those standards for two years if technology or fuel problems arise.

"We tried to take the automotive industry into consideration, but still keep our clean air goals," explained subcommittee Chairman Paul Rogers, D-Fla. "We gave the industry a three-year breathing period. Rather than changing our goals, we gave the industry more time to reach them."

Auto emission manufacturers now must warrant emission control devices to perform according to certain standards for five years or 50,000 miles after an EPA test expected to take about three years.

Rep. James W. Symington, D-Mo., successfully offered an amendment changing the warranty to cover 18 months or 18,000 miles unless a Federal Trade Commission study finds that the five-year, 50,000-mile emission warranty is not unfair to small business.

Some members think that while the shorter warranty would benefit small service shops, the consumer would be the ultimate loser.

The bill also would require vehicle manufacturers to prove that emission control systems won't produce pollutants that create an "unreasonable risk" to health or welfare.

The bill would establish an Inter-Agency Task Force on Research and Prevention of Environmental Cancer and Cardio-vascular Diseases. The task force would determine any link between pollutants and cancer or cardio-vascular diseases and recommend ways to eliminate it.

The bill also would require the EPA and several other federal agencies to investigate the effect of aerosol fluorocarbons on the earth's stratospheric ozone layer.

Some scientific and governmental experts contend fluorocarbons released by aerosol sprays interact with the ozone, causing depletion of that upper atmospheric layer. This results in greater human exposure to ultraviolet radiation, which may result in a higher risk of skin cancers, they say.

The bill also would ask the EPA to study the health effects of sulfates and vinyl chlorides.

Sulphuric acid mist is produced by catalytic converters installed in tailpipes of new cars to reduce carbon dioxide and hydrocarbon emissions.

Environmentalists favor the proposed mandated classification plan.

Administration supports projects of synthetic fuels

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Ford administration has decided to recommend federal support for projects aimed at synthetically producing the equivalent of 350,000 barrels of oil daily.

In an energy message last January, President Ford said the government should promote development of a synthetic fuels industry capable of producing the equivalent of one million barrels of oil a day by 1985 through conversion of shale to oil and coal to oil and gas.

Robert Seamans, head of the Energy Research and Development Administration, and William McCormick, chief of science and energy technology at the Office of Management and Budget, said the administration is proposing to underwrite up to $6 bilion of private industry's investment risk for development of synthetic fuels.

McCormick said that would be the government's maximum risk in the unlikely event that all of the projects failed. He said that if all succeeded the government would lose nothing.

Aspects of the proposal have been assembled by the task force, headed by McCormick, for a final report due for publication in a few weeks.

McCormick said the report includes an environmental study that warns of potentially severe environmental problems in the development of a million-barrel-a-day synthetic fuel program. He said this was a main reason a more extensive program is not being recommended immediately.

Experience with a smaller program, which would not in itself create insurmountable environmental problems, may show how a larger development can be carried out successfully, McCormick said.

He said the administration believes private industry will not develop synthetic fuel production early enough on its own because of high costs and uncertainties about markets and regulations. Commercial coal liquefaction or gasification plants may cost around $1 billion each.

McCormick said that if Congress passes such a program quickly, construction of synthetic fuel plants could begin in 1977, and the estimated 14 plants needed for the 350,000-barrel production level could be completed by the end of 1978.

Dr. Rodriquez initiated into college of surgeons

CHARLESTON — Dr. Gregorio L. Rodriquez, 103 N. Main St., is among a group of 1,802 initiates from around the world who became Fellows of the American College of Surgeons, the world's largest organization of surgeons, in informal convocation ceremonies held Oct. 17 at the San Francisco Civic Auditorium.

Fellows (members) of the college have earned the right to use the designation FACS (Fellow, American College of Surgeons), after their name, indicating that they have fulfilled comprehensive requirements of acceptable medical education and advanced training in general surgery or one of the 11 surgical specialties recognized by the college, and have given evidence of ethical practice and good character.

The initiates, making up one of the largest classes in recent years, included 1,647 surgeons from the United States and Canada and 155 surgeons from other nations.

The convocation ceremonies were a highlight of the college's 61st annual clinical congress, a five-day program which also included scientific and industrial exhibits, postgraduate courses, research-in-progress reports, panel discussions and symposia, live telecasts and films. The Congress was attended by more than 20,000 surgeons, their families, members of other medical disciplines and members of the scientific and general media.

Apprciation expressed for flood gate control

JEFFERSON CITY — Former Missouri Gov. Warren E. Hearnes and State Rep. Fred E. "Gene" Copeland, D-New Madrid, have expressed their appreciation to Gov. Julian M. Carroll of Kentucky for his forthright actions in closing the flood gates which control the Ohio and Mississippi rivers.

Carroll maintained close observations on the river stages through the Corp of Engineers, and gave the order to close the gates which literally saved thousands of acres of crops,, including much of an area near the confluence of the rivers in Missouri.

"The actions and foresightedness of Gov. Carroll will hopefully enable the farmers to get all the crops out without floods -- for this, we are certainly grateful," Hearnes expressed.

Copeland stated, "As a farmer myself in Southeast Missouri, I have personally felt the damages and losses of the floods in recent years, and I cannot tell you how much closing off those big rivers means to us." The crops of cotto· nd soybeans have been l to be good ones this outhern Missouri if the ompleted without the ling.

LIBERTY LINES

Sinai and the Arabs

By Robert M. Bartell

WASHINGTON, D.C. (Liberty Lobby News Service)—As could be expected the Arab world is entertaining considerable doubts about the recent Sinai pact. Sadat of Egypt is putting on a good public face, but the rumblings out of Syria, Lebanon and of course the Palestinian camp are that the pact will prove an obstacle to peace rather than a step toward it.

Outside of Egypt itself, Sinai agreement critics contend that Egypt has been broken out of the united Arab front against Israel. They fear the Egyptians will no longer concern themselves with the fate of the Palestinians, which is at the heart of the Arab conflict with Israel. The critics note that Secretary of State Henry Kissinger promised Israel billions of dollars worth of advanced weapons and it will be a long time—especially in view of the coming American elections—before any Secretary of State or Administration will think of interrupting the new flow of weapons, as a means of persuading Israel to make further withdrawals from occupied Arab territories.

One Palestinian is reported to have said, "You are doing what you always did. You say that you are making Israel strong because only a strong Israel can make concessions. But the opposite is true. How are you going to prod them now? You have made them immune to your pressure for the next 10 years."

In a recent New York Times article by Henry Tanner, the theory is advanced that for President Sadat, the most important reason for wanting the Sinai agreement was that he thought, and still thinks, that it will lead to direct American involvement in the Mideast, on the Arab side as well as the Israeli. If hostilities do break out in the Mideast, the theory may prove to be as fallacious as the Israeli lobby is powerful.

The Times article also says that most critics agree it would have been a far better policy for the U.S. to have pushed for a final settlement, including Israeli withdrawal to the pre-1967 lines, in return for a real peace accord. The article goes on, "Informed diplomats here (in Beirut, Lebanon) report that this actually was the approach chosen by Arabists in the U.S. government earlier this summer, but it was dropped as politically unfeasible because of expected opposition from Israel's supporters in Congress."

Now, that's an amazing statement for the New York Times to print. What they appear to endorse is the well-known but politely-ignored stranglehold the Israeli lobby has on the U.S. Congress.

Another quiet development stirring misgivings in the Mideast is that the U.S. has quietly shipped the Cobra helicopter gunship to Israel for the first time.

Any hope for an accord with Syria is going to involve another Kissinger giveaway. And a Syrian diplomat recently reported that Kissinger did tell President Assad of Syria that the U.S. would try to get something for Syria, but that he couldn't promise.

Why not? He's already given away untold billions of our dollars. What's a few hundred million more?

Thoughts

From The Living Bible

Shout with joy before the Lord, O earth! Obey him gladly; come before him, singing with joy. Try to realize what this means—the Lord is God! He made us—we are his people, the sheep of his pasture. Go through his open gates with great thanksgiving; enter his courts with praise. Give thanks to him and bless his name. For the Lord is always good. He is always loving and kind, and his faithfulness goes on and on to each succeeding generation.

Letters TO THE EDITOR

October 24, 1975

Editor
Standard
205 South New Madrid
Sikeston, Missouri 63801

Dear Editor:

In Jack Anderson's October 13 column, he accused the Federal government of "conspiring with the oil and gas interests to hit the American people with another shortage this winter—a shortage of natural gas." The facts do not support the charge.

I believe your readers are entitled to a more accurate and complete presentation of the facts about our country's natural gas situation.

There may, indeed, be shortages of natural gas in some states this winter, in spite of all the industry can do to try to meet essential demands. But this will not be caused by deliberate withholding of supplies by producers trying to extract higher prices from consumers. It will be due to the fact that (1) production from old gas fields is declining rapidly, and to the further fact that (2) unrealistically low Federal price ceilings on interstate gas during the past 21 years expanded consumer demand for gas while discouraging the search for new gas fields.

The same Federal Power Commission statistics to which Mr. Anderson refers show that on a nationwide basis, actual deliveries of natural gas to the interstate market for the year April 1974 through March 1975 were 5.5 per cent lower than in the previous year. The FPC now estimates that actual deliveries in the current year (April 1975 through March 1976) will drop another 3.9 per cent below the level of last year.

This downward trend seems certain to continue in the years ahead unless the Congress takes affirmative action to remove Federal price controls and encourage the search for new gas fields.

During the past two decades, while interstate natural gas prices were held at artificially low levels by Federal controls, gas consumption in this country more than doubled. For nearly a decade, the volume of natural gas produced each year has been substantially greater than the amount added to proved reserves through exploratory drilling in the lower 48 states. For the past four years, natural gas production has been more than double the volume of gas added to reserves.

The average wellhead price for natural gas sold in interstate commerce is about 30 cents per thousand cubic feet. The top price for "new" gas under FPC rulings is about 53 cents per thousand cubic feet. Meanwhile, gas produced and consumed within the borders of a single state is free of Federal control and sells at market value, which is three to four times the top price allowed for interstate natural gas sales.

Regarding the effect of decontrol on consumer costs, two points are significant. First, most natural gas in interstate commerce is sold on long-term contracts, with terms up to 20 years. Second, the wellhead price of gas represents only about 20 per cent of the price paid by the average residential consumer served by interstate pipelines. The other 80 per cent of that consumer's monthly bill reflects the expenses involved in transporting the gas thousands of miles and the cost of distributing it through local utility companies.

Decontrol of wellhead prices would have no effect on transportation or distribution costs, so the consumer would experience price increases only gradually, as new gas is discovered and blended into the overall supply. The Federal Energy Administration estimates that the removal of price controls for new gas would increase the average homeowner's yearly gas bill only $10.21 in 1976 (an average of 85c per month), $13.30 in 1977, and $19.15 in 1978.

Moreover, the alternatives to increasing our supply of new natural gas would be much more expensive substitute fuels. There is no consumer advantage to artificially low natural gas prices if this means there is less and less gas to be had.

Sincerely,
Harry H. Hardy

Now, that's an amazing statement for the New York Times to print. What they appear to endorse is the well-known but politely-ignored stranglehold the Israeli lobby has on the U.S. Congress.

Another quiet development stirring misgivings in the Mideast is that the U.S. has quietly shipped the Cobra helicopter gunship to Israel for the first time.

Any hope for an accord with Syria is going to involve another Kissinger giveaway. And a Syrian diplomat recently reported that Kissinger did tell President Assad of Syria that the U.S. would try to get something for Syria, but that he couldn't promise.

Why not? He's already given away untold billions of our dollars. What's a few hundred million more?

Thoughts

From The Living Bible

Shout with joy before the Lord, O earth! Obey him gladly; come before him, singing with joy. Try to realize what this means—the Lord is God! He made us—we are his people, the sheep of his pasture. Go through his open gates with great thanksgiving; enter his courts with praise. Give thanks to him and bless his name. For the Lord is always good. He is always loving and kind, and his faithfulness goes on and on to each succeeding generation.

Letters TO THE EDITOR

October 24, 1975

Editor
Standard

Sikeston, Missouri 63801

Dear Editor:

In Jack Anderson's October 13 column, he accused the Federal government of "conspiring with the oil and gas interests to hit the American people with another shortage this winter—a shortage of natural gas." The facts do not support the charge.

I believe your readers are entitled to a more accurate and complete presentation of the facts about our country's natural gas situation.

There may, indeed, be shortages of natural gas in some states this winter, in spite of all the industry can do to try to meet essential demands. But this will not be caused by deliberate withholding of supplies by producers trying to extract higher prices from consumers. It will be due to the fact that (1) production from old gas fields is declining rapidly, and to the further fact that (2) unrealistically low Federal price ceilings on interstate gas during the past 21 years expanded consumer demand for gas while discouraging the search for new gas fields.

The same Federal Power Commission statistics to which Mr. Anderson refers show that on a nationwide basis, actual deliveries of natural gas to the interstate market for the year April 1974 through March 1975 were 5.5 per cent lower than in the previous year. The FPC now estimates that actual deliveries in the current year (April 1975 through March 1976) will drop another 3.9 per cent below the level of last year.

This downward trend seems certain to continue in the years ahead unless the Congress takes affirmative action to remove Federal price controls and encourage the search for new gas fields.

During the past two decades, while interstate natural gas prices were held at artificially low levels by Federal controls, gas consumption in this country more than doubled. For nearly a decade, the volume of natural gas produced each year has been substantially greater than the amount added to proved reserves through exploratory drilling in the lower 48 states. For the past four years, natural gas production has been more than double the volume of gas added to reserves.

The average wellhead price for natural gas sold in interstate commerce is about 30 cents per thousand cubic feet. The top price for "new" gas under FPC rulings is about 53 cents per thousand cubic feet. Meanwhile, gas produced and consumed within the borders of a single state is free of Federal control and sells at market value, which is three to four times the top price allowed for interstate natural gas sales.

Regarding the effect of decontrol on consumer costs, two points are significant. First, most natural gas in interstate commerce is sold on long-term contracts, with terms up to 20 years. Second, the wellhead price of gas represents only about 20 per cent of the price paid by the average residential consumer served by interstate pipelines. The other 80 per cent of that consumer's monthly bill reflects the expenses involved in transporting the gas thousands of miles and the cost of distributing it through local utility companies.

Decontrol of wellhead prices would have no effect on transportation or distribution costs, so the consumer would experience price increases only gradually, as new gas is discovered and blended into the overall supply. The Federal Energy Administration estimates that the removal of price controls for new gas would increase the average homeowner's yearly gas bill only $10.21 in 1976 (an average of 85c per month), $13.30 in 1977, and $19.15 in 1978.

Moreover, the alternatives to increasing our supply of new natural gas would be much more expensive substitute fuels. There is no consumer advantage to artificially low natural gas prices if this means there is less and less gas to be had.

Sincerely,
Harry H. Hardy

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 29, the 302nd day of 1975. There are 63 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1929, the New York stock market collapsed, setting off the worst financial catastophe in U.S. history.

On this date:

In 1618, Sir Walter Raleigh was executed in London, charged with treason against England's King James I.

In 1682, William Penn landed at what is now Chester, Pa.

In 1918, German sailors mutinied at Kiel Naval Base, demanding prompt World War I peace negotiations with the Allies.

In 1923, the Republic of Turkey was proclaimed.

In 1940, numbers were drawn in the first peacetime military draft in the United States.

In 1956, Israel launched an attack against Egypt's Sinai Peninsula.

Ten years ago: The United States exploded an 80-kiloton hydrogen bomb 2,300 feet below the surface of Amchitka Island in the Aleutians.

Five years ago: The United States and the Soviet Union signed an agreement to work toward docking two spacecraft while in orbit.

Today's birthdays: Cartoonist Bill Mauldin is 54. Ex-major league baseball manager Bill Rigney is 56.

Thought for today: True friendship is like sound health.

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Oct. 29, the 302nd day of 1975. There are 63 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1929, the New York stock market collapsed, setting off the worst financial catastophe in U.S. history.

On this date:

In 1618, Sir Walter Raleigh was executed in London, charged with treason against England's King James I.

In 1682, William Penn landed at what is now Chester, Pa.

In 1918, German sailors mutinied at Kiel Naval Base, demanding prompt World War I peace negotiations with the Allies.

In 1923, the Republic of Turkey was proclaimed.

In 1940, numbers were drawn in the first peacetime military draft in the United States.

In 1956, Israel launched an attack against Egypt's Sinai Peninsula.

Ten years ago: The United States exploded an 80-kiloton hydrogen bomb 2,300 feet below the surface of Amchitka Island in the Aleutians.

Five years ago: The United States and the Soviet Union signed an agreement to work toward docking two spacecraft while in orbit.

One year ago: Former President Richard Nixon was on the critical list at a Long Beach, Calif., hospital because of internal bleeding after an operation for a blood clot.

Today's birthdays: Cartoonist Bill Mauldin is 54. Ex-major league baseball manager Bill Rigney is 56.

Thought for today: True friendship is like sound health.
